GERMANY ACCEPTS HOOVER DEBT PROPOSAL AS FRANCE WITHHOLDS FINAL DECISION

South Stricken by Severest Heat Wave of Year

RAIN FORECAST GIVES PROSPECT OF RELIEF TODAY

Three Cities in Carolinas Report Readings of 100; Thousands Are Driven to Parks and Cool Spots in Rural Section.

RAINS HELPFUL TO MIDDLE WEST

Seven Fatalities Recorded in New York; Philadelphia Swelters as Mercury Rises to 98.

The longest day of the year also was the hottest for Atlanta and other cities in the south Sunday, where maximum temperatures of from 90 to 100 drove thousands to parks, swimming pools and to cool spots in the rural sections.

Three cities in the Carolinas, Greensboro and Durham, N. C., and Spartanburg, S. C., each reported readings of 100—the highest in the south—but thundershowers brought relief to some sections of those two states.

Showers were predicted for a number of southern states tomorrow, bringing sweltering citizens the prospect of relief from the week-long siege of hot weather.

Virginia had its hottest weather of the year—95 at Richmand, 91 at Bristol and 92 at Norfolk.

Birmingham, Ala., reported a 99 high, but showers came when the mercury was at its height and brought a drop of 10 degrees. Montgomery, Ala., had a high of 94, but got relief tonight from a thunderstorm.

The maximum at Knoxville, Tenn., today was 97, which was above normal but not a record. Nashville had 95, also a few degrees above normal. One death from the heat was reported at Nashville Saturday. Memphis' 94 today equalled the year's high, set Friday. A temperature of 97 caused Chattanooga to swelter. The Chattanooga area was reported suffering from drouth, only .27 of an inch of rain having fallen there this month.

The temperature at Macon got to a little above 97 today, and Savannah and Atlanta also had readings in the nineties.

A high reading of 94, the highest of the year, drove residents of New Orleans to artificially cooled theaters, to parks, swimming pools and the Lake Ponchartrain beach. Cloudy weather, with thundershowers, was predicted there for tomorrow.

Jacksonville, in northeast Florida, reported 88, while the report of the most comfortable weather in the south came from Miami, where the maximum was 87. Tampa reported a high of 92.

It reached 92 in Little Rock, Ark., today but this mark was not a new high, it having reached 93 there previously.

Charlotte, N. C., with a high of 98, had the hottest June 21 weather since 1928, when it got up to 98.2.

Texans turned to swimming pools, the golf links and shaded drives today as temperatures climbed high.

At Dallas the maximum was 92, 5 degrees lower than the mark of 97 last week.

Amarillo seemed to be the hottest spot in the state, the temperatures climbing to 96 there at mid-day.

Corpus Christi, on the Gulf coast, fanned by a coast breeze, remained comfortable while the temperature stayed at 86 and below. Galveston, likewise, kept comfortably cool.

HEAT IS DISSIPATED BY MID-WEST RAINS

New Yorkers breathed easily with temperatures ranging from 80 to a peak 84, nine degrees cooler than the previous day. Notwithstanding the temperature drop, five heat prostrations and seven deaths were recorded. Philadelphia sweltered as the mer-

W. & A. ROAD SALE PROPOSED IN BILL

Dorsett Measure Would Set Up Commission To Dispose of Holdings.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

L. Z. Dorsett, Carroll county representative-elect, announced Sunday he would introduce a bill in the coming session of the general assembly proposing the outright sale of the Western & Atlantic railroad, its terminals and other properties connected with the railroad.

The W. & A. is a state-owned road, now under lease of 50 years to the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. During the special session of the legislature it was the center of controversy, resulting in the passing of a bill to discount further rentals of the road, which was vetoed by Governor Hardman. The house overrode the veto but it failed in the senate.

Injection of the W. & A. issue into the forthcoming session may add another major problem to those already listed—redistricting, refinancing and reorganization of state departments. The legislature convenes Wednesday with Governor-elect Richard B. Russell Jr. to be inaugurated Saturday.

Would Create Commission.

Mr. Dorsett's bill proposes the creation of a commission, composed of the governor, chairman of the public service commission, the attorney-general, Robert F. Maddox, Samuel C. Dobbs, Clark Howell Sr., of Fulton county; W. H. Dorris, Crisp county; Joseph M. Brown, Cobb county, and J. W. Vaughn, of Bartow county.

The commission would perfect its own organization "to carry out and effectuate such sale." In event any of those named declined to serve on the commission, the others would select successors. The state officials named would have authority to fix the pay of the other members of the commission who are not employes of the state.

The bill provides that the commission is "hereby charged with the duty and vested with full power and authority to ascertain, consider and

Georgia Deputy Held In Slaying of Guard

ELLAVILLE, Ga., June 21.—John Yates, Stuart county deputy warden, was held tonight in the Schley county jail here in connection with the murder of Zach Aileywine, of Lumpkin, former convict guard. Yates' arrest followed a verdict by Coroner H. H. Rigsby which stated Aileywine died of pistol wounds inflicted by the deputy warden.

Aileywine's body was found lying beside the Ellaville-Oglethorpe highway two and a half miles from here. Yates was taken into custody several miles away, seated in his automobile. Sheriff D. C. Rigsby stated the deputy warden denied knowledge of the shooting.

GEORGIANS READY TO WELCOME KEY ON RETURN TODAY

David Robinson Is in Charge of Greeting for Atlanta Executive at Dock.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—David Robinson, president of the Downtown League of New York city and acting for Miller M. Brister, president of the Georgia Society, announced tentative plans today for greeting James L. Key, mayor of Atlanta, when he arrives from Europe tomorrow on the liner Ile de France.

Robinson said he would consult Atlantans who are in New York to meet the mayor before formulating final plans. He said Georgia Society delegates will meet Atlanta visitors and go to the dock tomorrow to greet the Ile de France.

The Georgia Society will give a luncheon or dinner for the mayor if he is able to remain in the city overnight.

Mayor Key returns tomorrow with the party of mayors who made a month's tour of France.

The arrival of the party of mayors and civic representatives, whose activities on a "good will" tour of France frequently occupied the front pages of their home town newspapers, was awaited with keen interest tonight.

Among the 23 members of the group, particular interest attached to Mayor Key, whose statements on prohibition while abroad had widespread repercussions at home.

Four days after he landed in France Mayor Key declared:

"I did not need to come to France to find out that in the United States prohibition is a failure."

This statement was both defended and criticized by friends and civic associates in Atlanta.

Last week, while the Ile de France was steaming across the Atlantic, the Georgian issued another statement:

"The 18th amendment was not foisted upon the American people as I have been quoted as saying. It was passed gladly and enthusiastically in war time as an effort to help win the war.

"As a peace-time measure it has never been submitted to our people in peace time and in fairness it should be so submitted."

The question of drinking champagne at banquets became a problem as soon as the party landed in France a month ago today.

Mayor John Porter, of Los An-

REDS IN AMBUSH DEFEAT CHINESE

Chiang Balances Losses in Second Engagement With Communists.

HONGKONG, June 22.—(Monday)—The government was victorious today in one engagement with communists, but lost heavily in another.

A division of President Chiang Kai-shek's troops was ambushed by reds, about 300,000 of whom are operating throughout southern China, and lost 10,000 rifles, 100 trench mortars and 30 machine guns.

Casualties were not mentioned in dispatches, but were believed to have been heavy.

The 19th army, commanded by General Chen Ming-Shu, former governor of Canton, surrounded reinforcements being hurried against Chiang Kai-shek's troops, and severe-

'Zeppelin on Wheels' Beats Time Of Passenger Planes in Test Run

BERLIN, June 21.—(AP)—Franz Kruckenberg's Zeppelin on Wheels today bettered by four minutes the regular Lufthansa passenger plane time between Hamburg and Spandau, on the outskirts of Berlin.

A commercial airplane, which took off from Hamburg at the same time in order to follow the progress of the strange new rail speedster, was behind most of the time, but overtook the flying Zeppelin on Wheels when it slowed down at the end of the journey.

Kruckenberg left Hamburg at 3:27 a. m. and negotiated the 160-mile stretch in 1 hour 36 minutes. His highest speed was 230 kilometers (about 143 miles) an hour.

The inventor said his car was capable of even greater speed, but today's test was to demonstrate what such a propeller-driven coach can do when following a regular time table.

The coach, known as a Stream Line Zeppelin on Wheels, is driven by a propeller, powered by a 12-cylinder, 600-horsepower airplane engine.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian L. Harris Given Oberlaender Awards; Off on German Goodwill Trip

Julian LaRose Harris, news director of The Constitution, and his wife, Mrs. Julia Collier Harris, well-known author, will sail today from New York on the S. S. Columbus for Europe, where they will study reparations and public opinion in Germany and Austria.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris and five other Americans have received awards from the Oberlaender Trust, founded recently by Gustav Oberlaender, of Reading, Pa., as an integral part of the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation, Inc., for the purpose of promoting good-will between the United States and all German-speaking countries.

Articles by Mr. and Mrs. Harris, especially timely in view of President Hoover's proposal Saturday night to allow a year's respite on collection of war debts, will appear in The Constitution from time to time during their two-month stay in Europe.

Those receiving the awards include Dr. Alice Hamilton, professor of medicine, Harvard Medical school, Boston, Mass.; Dr. Howard Hanson, director, Eastman School of Music, of the University of Rochester, Rochester, N. Y.; Dr. Robert A. Millikan, director of the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, Cal., who will return the visit of Professor Albert Einstein; John Nolen, city planning and landscape architect, Cambridge, Mass., and Dr. Walter Williams, president, University of Missouri.

"By recognizing the public service of these men and women and by enabling them to further acquaint themselves with the people and the activities in their fields of work in Germany and Austria, the trustees are putting into effect the wish of Mr. Oberlaender, the founder, that the principal and income of the million-dollar endowment be utilized not only to strengthen the spirit of good-will between the people of the United States and of all German-speaking countries, but to make a helpful contribution to American life," said an announcement of the awards.

Wide Interest Displayed.

Since organization of the Oberlaender Trust there has been such wide interest in the opportunities for study in German-speaking countries offered by Mr. Oberlaender that the trustees have decided to make a second group of awards in the fall, it was announced. Under terms of the awards, each individual is given complete freedom of action to arrange contacts and itineraries; the trustees will not exercise supervision over their work or publications.

Mr. Nolen is now en route to Germany, and Dr. Millikan expects to arrive in Germany about November 1. The time of departure of other recipients has not been determined.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris are both familiar with European conditions and affairs. Mr. Harris was editor of the European edition of the New York Herald and served as European correspondent. Mrs. Harris has written articles from Paris for the Herald Syndicate.

Mr. Harris is a native of Savannah, where he was born June 21, 1874, the son of Joel Chandler Harris (Uncle Remus) and Mrs. Esther LaRose Harris. He was educated at Gordon Military Academy, in Atlanta, and studied French at St. Ephrem d-Upton, Canada. He married Miss Julia Florida Collier, of Atlanta, October 26, 1897.

The newspaper career of Mr. Harris began in 1894 as managing editor of the Atlanta Daily News. In 1895 he was assistant to the Sunday editor of the Chicago Times-Herald. From that post he came to The Constitution as night editor, and was made city editor in 1896, and managing editor in 1897. Mr. Harris was with the Tri-Weekly Constitution from 1905 to 1907, and was business manager of the Uncle Remus Home Magazine from 1907 to 1909, editor and general manager from 1909 to 1911, editor in 1911, and advertising manager in 1912.

From Sunday editor of the New York Herald in 1914, Mr. Harris went to the advertising management of the New York Evening Telegram the next year, and in 1916 was editor of the European edition of the New York Herald. He was assistant manager of the Herald in 1918, and was Paris correspondent, and later editor and manager of the European edition in 1919.

Mr. Harris came back to Georgia in 1920 as general manager of the Columbus Enquirer, and became editor

TECH GYMNASIUM RAZED BY BLAZE

Building at Third and Techwood Destroyed by Early Morning Fire.

The combination basketball court-gymnasium of Georgia Tech was a mass of smoldering embers Sunday following fire of undetermined origin that early in the morning razed the structure despite the efforts of three companies of firemen. The loss was estimated to be $12,000.

The fire, which was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock, had spread over the entire one-story frame structure and was a solid mass of flame when firemen arrived. Chief John Terrell stated that all the firemen could do was to play lines of water upon the inferno to prevent it from spreading to the north stand of Grant field.

The basketball court, located at the corner of Third street, N. W., and Techwood drive, is located just behind the north stands of Grant field and was erected about five years ago. The building was a one-story frame affair with a tarpaper roof. It was the only basketball court that the Yellow Jacket school possessed, and was used as a lecture room for athletic teams, and for indoor football practice during inclement weather, in addition to basketball games.

A few students, awaiting the opening of summer school, were on the campus and they stated to reporters Sunday morning that about half a dozen students had been in the habit of sleeping in the gym during vacation but that there were none in the building at the time of the fire. The fire, coming just before daylight, cast a red glow in the sky that could be seen for several miles, and within a few minutes several thousand persons had left their beds and were upon the scene.

A young man whose name was not learned turned in a second alarm from Lucile avenue and Lawton street

DOCTOR WILL TALK IN FAITHFULL CASE

Dr. Jameson-Carr Expects To Be Able to Aide Probe of Beauty's Death.

BOSTON, June 21.—(AP)—Dr. George Jameson-Carr, physician of the steamship Franconia, arrived here from England today with information which he believes will aid New York state authorities in solving the death of Starr Faithfull.

The physician, a former friend of the girl whose lifeless body was found on the sands at Long Beach, Long Island, on June 8, arrived here aboard the Cunard S. S. Laconia and remained aboard the liner when it left here late in the afternoon for New York.

There he will submit to questioning Monday by officials investigating the girl's death and will turn over to them three letters which he received from her. He declined to disclose the contents of the missives but he said:

"I wouldn't waste my well-earned leave if I did not feel I could aid the grand jury and help clear up the 72 hours before Starr Faithfull's death."

Dr. Jameson-Carr, who talked freely with newspapermen who met him when the ship arrived, declined to discuss any aspects of the case from a professional standpoint as a physician, but told of his personal acquaintance with the girl and his social contacts with her.

He had known her, he said, since June, 1927, when he met her aboard the steamship Aurania, of which he was physician, and on which she was a cruise passenger from Montreal. He said he treated her in his professional capacity on three occasions and had seen her several other times, the last being on May 29, aboard the S. S. Franconia, when it sailed from New York.

On that day Starr was aboard the ship and was put ashore after the liner had left her pier.

TWO MEN KILLED BY BLAZING GUNS IN GEORGIA SUNDAY

Mariettan Shot Dead in Woman's Home; Sylvester Filling Station Scene of Tragedy.

Two men were shot to death in Georgia on Sunday.

In Marietta, 16 miles from Atlanta, George Ayers, 40, was shot three times, once in the back, at the home of Mrs. C. M. Wright, 403 Powder Springs avenue. J. B. Fields, 26, is held on suspicion by the Marietta police pending a coroner's inquest to be held Monday morning.

Near Sylvester, in Worth county, southwest Georgia, J. T. Bius, 39, was shot to death at a filling station owned by J. W. Mays. Mays is in the Worth county jail pending outcome of a coroner's inquest.

MARIETTAN SHOT DEAD IN HOME OF WOMAN

MARIETTA, Ga., June 21.—George Ayers, 40, was shot to death shortly after noon Sunday at the home of Mrs. C. M. Wright, at 403 Powder Springs avenue. He was shot three times, one of the bullets entering his back and the other two near the heart.

J. B. Fields, the only other man in the house at the time, is held by police pending a coroner's inquest, which is to be held on Monday morning. Mrs. Wright and her daughter, Annie May Smith, 26, were also in the house at the time of the shooting.

Ayers was married and is the father of six children. He was employed as a stonecutter by the McNeel Marble Company here and made his home on Burnt Hickory road in a house owned by Frank Reid. Funeral arrangements have not been made. The body is at the undertaking parlors of John Dobbins, Marietta.

J. T. BIUS INSTANTLY KILLED BY SHOTGUN

SYLVESTER, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—W. O. May, operator of a filling station and grocery store near here, was in the Worth county jail today in connection with the fatal shooting late last night of Jake Bias, 39.

Sheriff J. N. Sumner quoted May as saying he shot Bias when the latter threatened him and his wife with a "whipping." The sheriff said there were no witnesses to the shooting except May and Mrs. May, who were in the store when Bias arrived. May told the sheriff he ordered Bias to leave the store and that the shot was fired during an argument which followed.

FOUR MORE SLAIN AS GANGS STRIKE

Gunmen Get 2 Victims in New York, One in Detroit, One in Chicago.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Death erased two more names from the police department's list of gangsters today. They were those of John Soricelli, 31, known to the authorities as a driver for Dutch Schultz, Bronx beer baron, and Charlie Liebman, a former aide of Frankie Uale (Yale).

Soricelli, shot twice at his tenement home, died in a hospital. Liebman's body, with two bullets an inch apart behind his right ear, was sprawled across a lonely road near Cold Spring, a few miles up the Hudson river. Rival gangsters did both shootings, detectives said.

Daniel Iamascia, bodyguard to Schultz, was shot fatally Thursday in an encounter with two detectives. Schultz, whose true name is Arthur Flegenheimer, subsequently was arrested and held until yesterday when he was released in $75,000 temporary bail on three indictments accusing him of felonious assault and violation of the Sullivan law in carrying a concealed weapon.

Both of the bullets which struck Soricelli passed through his body, but a bloody trail showed investigators he made his way to the kitchen of his apartment before he was taken to a hospital.

"Don't bother me, I'm dying," he responded to police questions at the hospital where he died an hour later.

Soricelli apparently was taken unaware, police said, since he left two

YOUNG APPROVES WAR DEBT RESPITE

Framer of Present Reparations Plan Backs Moratorium Proposal.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company, issued a statement today expressing hearty approval of President Hoover's proposal to postpone payment of foreign debts for one year.

He declared it takes only "intelligence, courage and good will to make a prosperous world," and called upon other governments similarly to postpone war debt payments.

Mr. Young's statement follows:

"These are bad times in the world. We have had bad business and unemployment, bad temper and bad politics. Each react on the other, so many are suffering from want and more from the fear of it. Bitterness and suspicion are the result.

"Naturally we are in a mood to arm and not to disarm; to tear down, not to build up; and so, among other things, we destroy our own prosperity. The silence of America at such a time would be most discouraging. Now she has spoken through the president. Persons of all parties stand by as they ought.

"The proposal to postpone all debt payments, even for a year, is not only the act of a wise creditor, but the helpful word of a great democracy. Coming at a time when we all were beginning to doubt whether a democracy could act promptly, wisely and helpfully, it is most encouraging.

"It is to be hoped that other governments can and will act also, and that private interests, with restored faith, will be helpful too. It takes only intelligence, courage and good will to make a prosperous world. We have the material things already. I heartily approve the president's action."

Ten Persons Rescued After Yacht Capsizes

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Ten members of a yachting party were saved from drowning in the Hudson river off Upper Riverside drive tonight when their small craft capsized and sank.

Police who aided in the rescues reported there had been no loss of life.

The boat was returning from a river cruise when the mishap occurred. Large crowds in Isham park and on the drive saw the motorboat suddenly go over and heard the cries of women and men in the water.

The proprietor of a boathouse put out with five small launches and picked up the wrecked party, all members of which left for their homes without revealing their identity.

Pilot and Wife Die In Airplane Crash

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Myron Hutchinson, of Elmira, N. Y., was fatally injured and her husband, who was pilot, was killed instantly when their plane crashed on the Pelham Country Club golf course today. Witnesses said the motor of the plane went dead at a low altitude. Mrs. Hutchinson died in a New Rochelle hospital.

Law Ensnares Mullins Family Doing '45' Through Jonesboro

For pity sakes, the whole Mullins family, with the exception of Uncle Willie, got pinched Sunday afternoon. The Little Woman, K. O., Kitty Higgins and all of 'em.

Uncle Willie, or maybe it's Moon, himself, escaped the minions of Clayton county law by the simple expedient of not being there.

And the whole reason it happened was Mushmouth talked too much.

Mrs. Frank Willard, wife of the creator of the comic strip "Moon Mullins," which appears daily in The Constitution; her small daughter and smaller son, the nurse and the chauffeur, were passing through Jonesboro Sunday afternoon en route from their Florida home to Chicago to join Frank. They were hailed by the law and asked the usual question, "Whatcher think you're doin'."

Now, the Little Woman, in this case Mrs. Willard, whose slenderness and beauty is all out of character with the Little Woman of the daily strip, had Sheriff Adamson about ready to admit his astigmatism might have caused him to read his speedometer wrong. But old Mushmouth, the family chauffeur, who was trailing in the second car, having been forced to relinquish the pathfinding position at Macon, where his engine started to

WORLD SENTIMENT SWINGS IN FAVOR OF YEAR 'HOLIDAY'

Official Acceptance of Germany Is Dispatched to United States Within 24 Hours After Announcement of Plan.

AMERICAN OPINION SHARPLY DIVIDED

Early Approval of Britain and Italy Seen by Berlin With Hope That France Will Join.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Gratified by the response from Europe to his proposal for a one-year moratorium of intergovernmental debts, President Hoover rested over the week-end at his Rapidan camp, awaiting official action by the European governments.

Germany sent its acceptance of the proposal to Washington; Italy and Great Britain were expected to do likewise, and it was hoped France also would fall in with the others.

Dr. Julius Curtius, Germany's foreign minister, indorsed the president's proposal "with unqualified joy." Outstanding leaders in Great Britain approved it without exception, although some of them warned that a one-year debt holiday might not bring about complete economic recovery.

Italy was represented as willing to co-operate in any undertaking which would ease the economic crisis, but in France there seemed to be a tendency to stipulate that any relief measures must be hooked up with the Young plan. The French cabinet meets early in the week to consider the president's proposal.

In the United States, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, whose name was not included in the list of those whom the president named as approving a moratorium, declined to comment at his home in Little Rock. Representative Garner, of Texas, minority leader in the house, whose name also was absent from the president's list, could not be reached.

Representative La Guardia, independent republican, of New York, issued a statement accusing the president of "executive double-crossing" inasmuch as he had "usurped unto himself the legislative functions of the congress."

Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, said in a statement at Boise that unless reperations are readjusted and European armaments drastically reduced a moratorium "would simply postpone the day of disaster."

GERMAN GOVERNMENT FORWARDS ACCEPTANCE

BERIN, June 21.—(AP)—The German government today sent to Washington its official acceptance of President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium on all inter-governmental debts.

It is expected here that Great Britain and Italy will accept the debt suspension forthwith and the hope is expressed that France also will join.

France receives about $192,000,000 a year from Germany, half of which must be paid for war debts, but official Germany hopes nevertheless that she will throw her support to the action initiated by Mr. Hoover.

Julius Curtius, Germany's foreign minister, in a statement to the Associated Press today, expressed the gratitude of his whole nation at President Hoover's proposal for a one-year moratorium of intergovernmental war debts.

"He has placed his finger on the sore spot," said this usually unemo-

Twelve Cubans Hurt During Demonstration

BAYAMO, Cuba, June 21.—(AP)—Twelve persons were injured early today when police and soldiers fired on unemployed demonstrators outside a hall where city officials and other political figures were holding a banquet.

Officials at the function included Quintin George, popular party senator, and Mayor Clemente Perez. They were reported to have fired pistols into the air in an effort to disperse the crowd of several hundred which had shouted demands for food and work.

When the demonstration became more threatening police and soldiers were called. All public buildings were placed under guard after rumors spread that attempts would be made to burn the town.

FLORIDA LAWMAKERS HURRY REVENUE WORK

Only Four Days Left for Consideration of State Tax Problems.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., June 21.—(AP)—With but four days remaining before adjournment, the Florida legislature tomorrow will continue the trail of new sources of revenue, sought through a regular session of 60 days and the current 20-day extraordinary session ending Thursday.

The general appropriations bill for two years' operation of state government awaited consideration of both the house and senate. The state budget commission recommended an appropriation of $14,000,000, but the house slashed it to $12,000,000 and the senate to $11,000,000 through reduced salaries and trimming of department expenses.

Legislators said an appropriations bill must be enacted into law before the legislature can disband.

Out of the special session mill thus far has come only one major revenue measure, although scores were considered. The one passed and sent to the governor increased motor vehicle licenses 33 per cent to provide funds for a $7,500,000 appropriation for public schools.

The special session was called by Governor Carlton to consider only finance and taxation matters, and a two-thirds vote was necessary to introduce bills not within the purview of the call.

'Popular Pulpit Iifidels' Hit In Speech by Lutheran Leader

POCONO PINES, Pa., June 21.—(AP)—Walter A. Maier, professor at Concordia Theological Seminary St. Louis, in an address for delivery before the International Walther League convention which opened here today, declared the twentieth century has produced "popular pulpit infidels."

"These highly publicized traitors betray their Lord in a manner which would make Judas blush," he said. "There have been apostles of impurity and free love before, but it is the notorious accomplishment of this age that those who champion loose marital relations and all of the moral bankruptcy which that involves are greeted and feted throughout the nation.

"Men like Sir Bertrand Russel, who openly teaches that physical infidelity is not serious, and former Judge Ben Lindsey, who boasts that 90 per cent of American students agree with him in his companionate marriage program, have become the men of the hour for a growing element.

"Our country has had immoral literature, but it never has been as cheap and easily accessible to young readers as now, in the age of magazine madness when selfish and savage commercialism piously parades as truth.

"People have always had the temptations of immoral entertainment, but again it has become the unworthy distinction of our age that it has so frequently used the fine invention of the motion picture, a form of amusement which could be kept unobjectionable, to blast away every vestige of the ideals of clean living and fine life."

Professor Maier then called upon Lutheran young people to "hurdle the high barriers on the path of spiritual and moral progress."

MORE TESTIMONY TODAY IN TRIAL OF CALDWELL

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 21.—(AP) The trial of Rogers Caldwell, head of the once powerful investment house of Caldwell & Company, on a fraudulent breach of trust charge, enters another week tomorrow with further testimony scheduled by the state regarding alleged violations.

E. A. Goodloe, cashier of the Bank of Tennessee, before its failure as a part of the Caldwell organization, has testified to three classes of alleged trust violations, which he listed as "flagrant," "serious" and "less serious."

Actress Takes Poison After Cool Reception

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Dorothy Deer Horn, 22-year-old star and director of the play "Thais," which had its Broadway premier Thursday, was taken to a hospital today in critical condition.

Her room-mate, Miss Hilda Schiffer, said the actress had taken poison during a fit of despondency over the unfavorable reception accorded the show by critics.

Miss Schiffer said Miss Horn also had trouble with stage hands and had been so unnerved during the discouraging reaction of yesterday's audiences she took sedatives at the conclusion of last night's performance.

The actress told a physician who treated her late last night she had taken the sedative to ease a headache, but later, Miss Schiffer said, admitted she had taken it with suicidal intent.

MYSTERY MURDER PROBED IN FLORIDA

MELBOURNE, Fla., June 21.—(AP) Although three men have been arrested, authorities indicated tonight that the solution of the killing of Willis Ellis at his home near here had not been found.

Ellis was slain as he slept early Saturday morning. Three negroes have been arrested on charges of suspicion but it was understood that none of their finger-prints corresponded with those found in the Ellis bedroom.

LAST RITES TODAY FOR REV. J. R. KING

Services for the Rev. James Rufus King, widely known Methodist minister residing in Decatur, who died at the Emory University hospital Saturday night, will be conducted at the First Methodist church in Decatur at 11 o'clock this morning.

The Rev. Horace S. Smith, pastor; Dr. Sterling P. Wiggins, presiding elder, and Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, editor of the Christian Advocate, will officiate. Interment will be in Oakland cemetery.

For the past 10 years Dr. King had been one of the veteran ministers of his conference, being one of the superannuated ministers of the North Georgia annual conference of the Southern Methodist church. A week ago he fell and broke his hip. His condition grew worse, with complications setting in, and he was removed to Emory University hospital last Friday, where he died Saturday.

He was born in Florida August 24, 1855, and graduated from Wofford College at Spartanburg, S. C., in 1879, the same year that he was licensed as a minister. He joined the North Georgia conference in December, 1880, at Augusta. He married Miss Harriett Lillie Gallagher March 20, 1883. He was presiding elder of the following North Georgia districts: Gainesville, Rome and Augusta. In addition he has held pastorates in Milledgeville, Morganton Mission, Dahlonega, Lawrenceville, Augusta, Atlanta, Cedartown, Elberton, Newnan, Griffin, Madison and others.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in speaking of Dr. King, paid the following tribuate Sunday: "I loved Brother King very much. He was a faithful and diligent minister of the gospel. He was industrious in his work and he was a man of excellent judgment. I would be present at the services Monday but my doctor forbids. I am pained to think of his going away."

Dr. King is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. C. F. Daniel, of Baltimore, and Mrs. D. M. Byrd, of Decatur; a son, E. Lewis King, Atlanta; a sister, Mrs. George Dunnaway, Decatur, and three grandsons, Madison Byrd Jr., James King Byrd and E. Lewis King Jr.

WOMAN IS JAILED IN HUSBAND'S DEATH

MERIDIAN, Miss., June 21.—(AP) Mrs. Mattie Powell, 21, is held in the county jail here while an investigation is being made into the slaying of her husband, John Powell, 50. The killing occurred in a remote part of Kemper county.

O. W. Esty, 50, said to have lived with Mr. and Mrs. Powell, surrendered to Sheriff John Lee Harbour, of Kemper county, and is being held at DeKalb, Miss. Esty, according to the county officers, claims to have killed Powell when the latter met him in the woods where they were cutting cross-ties.

Germany Accepts Debt Plan As France Defers Decision

tional statesman, "and now comes one of those rare moments in history when all reserve should be thrown aside. I can only say that we endorse with unqualified joy the heroic declaration which President Hoover has made."

Dr. Curtius smiled broadly and gestured with animation as he described the president's offer as a "gift from heaven."

"Not only will it lighten our burdens," he said, "it will remedy the situation throughout the world. Mr. Hoover has grasped that situation with unerring instinct and has thrown the whole weight of his position and personality into the task of solving it.

"It is a heroic act for him completely to swing the helm and mobilize America's indomitable will in the solution of the world crisis. What I admire particularly is the president's realization that what is needed now more than anything else is restoration of confidence. . . ."

Dr. Curtius turned next to the work of the German government itself.

"I think," he said, "the time has come to say that our foreign policy of conciliation and of international cooperation is now fully justified.

"It took an iron nerve to hold out when on every side there was clamor for haste.

"Chancellor Bruening and his whole cabinet have clung tenaciously to the position that the United States was the deciding factor and that nothing should be done to check the efforts of the American government.

"Our conference with Prime Minister MacDonald at Chequers now is shown to have been more than justified, for by a Providential coincidence your secretary of the treasury, Mr. Mellon, reached London almost immediately after we had left."

"There is one more thing I want to tell you," said Dr. Curtius, "That is that we must not forget that next to the United States France makes the greatest sacrifice in accepting President Hoover's plan.

"I do not hesitate to recognize this truth fully and appreciatively, and everything possible will be done by Germany to make it easy for France to accept. We have but one wish—to put an effective stop to the world economic crisis, and we want to cooperate with France toward that end in every possible manner."

CAREFUL EXAMINATION PLANNED BY FRANCE

PARIS, June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's suggestion for a year's suspension of war debt payments today caused widespread interest here. French officials are preparing for a close scrutiny of the proposal.

It was officially announced this evening that Finance Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin will "proceed with an examination of the American proposition and of the present financial situation in Germany."

It was declared that the finance minister already has held a long conference on the subject with Governor Moret, of the Bank of France.

The first impression was that President Hoover's offer will ease the financial situation in Germany, and that while the United States is prepared to make a large sacrifice, France will be expected to make a sacrifice second only to that of the United States.

Hoover's suggestion was taken to mean that Germany was to benefit by entire cessation of reparations.

Different Matter.

If Germany were only to cease conditional payments, under the Hoover offer, it was assumed that France's interest would not be seriously engaged. However, the postponing of unconditional payments—earmarked by the Young plan for payment of actual war devastation—would mean a real sacrifice on France's part, and it was understood that it would require careful study before any action is taken.

Le Temps summed up the situation as follows:

"If there is no error in the terms, Hoover's offer signified suspension during the year of conditional and unconditional portions of reparations and, as a counterpart, a year's suspension of war debt payments between the Allies.

"Hoover's offer then is a profound modification of the Young plan which does not foresee a complete reparations moratorium. It would mean a $240,000,000 annual sacrifice by the United States and a $100,000,000 one by France."

Several newspapers attributed Mr. Hoover's proposal to his interest in heavy loans by American banks to Germany.

Deeply Interested.

"The Americans are deeply interested in preventing a financial collapse of Germany in order to save important capital engaged," Le Temps declared. "There also are far repercussions in America of the irremediable European crisis.

"That undoubtedly determined the Washington government to modify its policy."

The Journal Des Debats emphasized the American interest in Germany's financial stability.

"Americans have for several years made big loans to Germany, which encouraged prodigality in state and private enterprises and contributed largely to the present financial and economic crisis," this newspaper declared.

Mr. Hoover's manner of touching on the disarmament connection between war debts was commented on by newspapers. They said he took pains not to make armament reduction a condition of the offer, which, it was generally agreed, would have made the proposition impossible.

EUROPE SEES RELIEF IN AMERICAN OFFER

LONDON, June 21.—(AP)—Europe today welcomed possible relief from her economic burdens through the plan of President Hoover to postpone for a year payments of intergovernmental debts and World War reparations.

Tomorrow her governments will turn to the task of solving their pressing financial and industrial problems with renewed zeal.

The outline of President Hoover's program for helping Europe in order to help the United States out of her own economic slump has been received in most European capitals as a life-saving stimulant just at a moment when it was feared the entire continent was headed for a crisis almost as serious as that created by the World War itself.

The French opinion, however, sounded somewhat of a dissenting note. The swift-moving events of the last ten days appeared to have failed to convince the Paris press, as the Washington and London governments have been convinced, that the threat of a German economic catastrophe was altogether real.

The full significance of the new American policy in regard to war debts and its effect upon the general European economic situation cannot be adjudged immediately, it was pointed out by observers. They added, however, that its strengthening effect already has been shown on the Berlin bourse and the stock exchange in London and in other cities will be watched closely tomorrow.

CANADIAN ECONOMISTS SEE BENEFIT IN PROPOSAL

OTTAWA, Ont., June 21.—(AP)—The consensus of opinions of Canadian politicians and economists on President Hoover's proposed one-year postponement of inter-government debts and reparations tonight is that the plan indirectly will greatly benefit the dominion.

Canada's share from the German reparations is about $4,000,000 yearly. Last year an additional $2,173,000 was received as a result of the success of the German international loan.

HOOVER IS GRATIFIED BY REPORTS ON PLAN

ORANGE, Va., June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover was pleased today at the reception accorded his proposal for a one-year moratorium upon all inter-governmental debts.

Resting in the coolness of his mountain retreat near here, he received a large bundle of newspapers by airplane early in the day and was informed by telephone of the world's reaction to his announcement made yesterday.

It was said at the camp that the president was "very much gratified" at the reports.

PROPOSAL IS ENDORSED BY EDWARD N. HURLEY

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP)—Edward N. Hurley, wartime head of the United States shipping board and now president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, today endorsed President Hoover's plan for a one-year moratorium on inter-governmental debts.

In a telegram to the chief executive, Hurley said he was convinced the president's action would appreciatively stimulate the world's business.

AMERICA AWAITS WORLD RESPONSE

Capital Confident Powers of Europe Will Approve War Debt Proposals.

BY FRANCIS M. STEPHENSON.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—America awaited expectantly but confidently tonight the full response of a debt-burdened world to her offer to forget for one year all intergovernmental financial obligations.

President Hoover announced the offer last night as a move to give the forthcoming year to the economic recovery of the world and to help free the recuperative forces already in motion in the United States from retarding influences from abroad."

From his fishing camp on the Rapidan river in Virginia, Mr. Hoover today listened intently to meager reports coming to him by telephone telling of the first reactions. He was reported gratified at these early messages and newspaper accounts.

He was in close touch with Secretary Mellon in London before the moratorium proposal was announced. Official Washington is inclined to believe informal assurances of support for it had been received from Great Britain and France through Mr. Mellon.

Assurances of "cordial" indorsement were given the proposition by leading republicans and democrats in congress before the president acted. For this reason he is confident of the necessary congressional approval and hopeful of the nation's support. Chairman Smoot, of the senate finance committee, joined the president today at his camp and added his approval.

The proposal would deprive America temporarily of more than $245,000,000 in war debts due in the next year. This follows a deficit of nearly a billion dollars for this year. However, it would cost France, Great Britain and the other allies during the year collection of more than $425,000,000 in reparations from destitute Germany.

Congressmen Support Move.

Virtually every member of congress now in Washington was interviewed by the president on the proposal and he announced their support. The group of 21 members of the senate and 18 members of the house, whom he listed as favoring the proposition, included outstanding democrats as well as republicans.

Washington was speculating today, however, over the failure of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, and Representative Garner, of Texas, the minority leader in the house, to be included in the list announced by the president.

At the White House it was said Mr. Hoover had talked over the telephone with Senator Robinson and was confident of the democratic leader's support. At the same time it was emphasized the president regarded the whole problem as non-political, and hoped for non-partisan consideration of it.

"EVENT OF IMPORTANCE." SOUTH AMERICAN COMMENT

BUENOS AIRES, June 21.—(AP)—Authoritative circles commented favorably today on President Hoover's suggestion for a postponement of war debts payments, saying that it not only would help Europe's recovery but would improve conditions throughout the world.

Newspapers published the full text of the Hoover announcement, describing it as an event of extraordinary importance in international affairs.

FAVORABLE ECHO HEARD IN MADRID NEWSPAPER

MADRID, June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's plan for a delay in payment of war reparations received a favorable echo in the Madrid press today. The conservative daily ABC termed the proposal as "a most important gesture" and declared that it undoubtedly will be a big step toward solving the international depression.

"This apparently means," the newspaper added, "that the United States has awakened to the fact that she cannot be paid her debts when the debtors, by tariff barriers, are barred from selling their products in the United States."

BANKERS IN SHANGHAI LAUD PLAN'S POSSIBILITIES

SHANGHAI, June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's offer of a moratorium on war debts has been received with gratification among bankers and businessmen here who see in it possibilities of a trade revival which would send up the price of silver.

AMERICA ABLE TO SAVE EUROPE FROM CATASTROPHE

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 21.—(AP)—Emile Vandervelde, laborite leader, asserts in the newspaper Le Peuple today through an article written before President Hoover's moratorium offer, that the United States is in a position to save Europe from catastrophe.

"American intervention," the article says, "would be conditional on formation of a united front by the European peoples to obtain an all-around reduction of debts and by a general reduction of European armaments."

ENCOURAGEMENT IS FELT BY LEAGUE REPRESENTATIVES

GENEVA, June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's proposal for a debt armistice constitutes a source of immense encouragement for all the work of the League of Nations, representatives of the league agreed today.

Belief was expressed the whole program of the commission for European union will be greatly facilitated, for they have long held that economic distress is the most dangerous obstacle to any program for international security involving disarmament.

ROME LAUDS UNITED STATES FOR MORATORIUM ACTION

ROME, June 21.—(AP)—President Hoover's proposal for a moratorium on war debts is widely praised here, although official comment will not be available until tomorrow.

Since Italy's debts are roughly equivalent to the reparations which she receives, a moratorium would have little direct effect but any improvement in world conditions would benefit Italy.

"NOBLE, IMPORTANT ACTION," SAYS AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL

VIENNA, June 21.—(AP)—Dr. Johann Schober, Austrian foreign minister, characterizing President Hoover's moratorium offer as a "noble and important action," asserted today that if brought to fruition it will produce real peace in Europe and throughout the world.

The president's offer is a cause for gratitude in Austria, he said, "for these enormous war debts are the despair and ruin of the nations."

APPROVAL OF PROPOSAL GIVEN BY THOMAS WHITE

TORONTO, Ont., June 21.—(AP)—Thomas White, Canadian war-time minister of finance, tonight expressed approval of President Hoover's proposal to postpone intergovernmental debts, reparations and relief debts for one year.

Leaders Hopeful Moratorium Will Aid Politics of World

BY BYRON PRICE.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—A troubled vista of international possibilities, stretching far beyond the immediate morass of economic depression, confronts the American government as it moves once more to the relief of Europe.

No less a subject than the peace of the world has been touched by the apprehensions of American and European statesmen as they reckoned up the consequences of the present tangle of financial obligations growing out of the great war. Every foreign office around the globe is asking itself what ultimate effect, in the transcendent field of international peace and politics, will flow from President Hoover's plan for a war debt-reparations moratorium.

Recently new elements of disturbance have been added to the European turmoil which succeeded the peace of Versailles.

National sensibilities have been troubled by the proposal for an Austro-German customs union, by the industrial advance of Russia, by the mounting aspirations of the Italy of Mussolini, by the military preparations of France, and by a dozen other cross-currents of European politics. Suspicion and speculation vex the neighborly relations of peoples and governments.

When the ranking statesmen of Germany recently talked things over with British officials in London, they found it expedient to go to the length or issuing a formal public statement affirming that the discussions were "not directed against France."

Irritant Problem.

It is agreed universally that the problem of war debts and reparations has been a constant irritant on the surface of an international relationship already racked by the pains of misunderstanding and fear. Whether such a situation was inevitable, or whether it was produced by designing politicians, who sought to stir agitation for their own purposes, the result is plain.

In approaching this situation at all, President Hoover and his advisers have been aware of its extreme delicacy. American diplomats abroad have cautioned them of the unexpected consequences which might be set in action by any well-intended, but ill-considered, word or deed. That they weighed most carefully the effects above and beyond economic considerations is shown by Mr. Hoover's statement of yesterday that the American government was seeking to forward both "political peace and economic stability."

Broadly, the American hope that peace has been served by the moratorium proposal rests on three suppositions, the correctness of which only time can demonstrate. They are:

That an easement of reparations payments will stabilize conditions in Germany, strengthening the hand of a government which has been threatened with overthrow and averting an outbreak of violence which might spread across international boundaries.

That a debt holiday all round will soften the tension between Germany and her neighbors, who are her creditors, and perhaps remove one element of nervousness in relations among those creditors themselves.

Strength To U. S. Plea.

That as a diplomatic gesture, the concessions made by the United States in the matter of war debt payments will add force to the American plea for a real reduction in armaments.

This latter subject was mentioned directly in Mr. Hoover's statement, although he disavowed any connection between his proposal and the disarmament conference to be held next February. He said, in effect, that the United States was not seeking to make a trade on this point, as has been suggested by some, by demanding that armaments be reduced before war debt payments were eased; but he added a hope that by making the concession beforehand, Washington would be in a better position to present its "good will" plea hereafter.

LA GUARDIA HITS HOOVER'S ACTION

New York Representative Terms Move "Hit Below Belt" for Congress.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, independent republican of New York, in a statement today declared President Hoover's proposal to postpone payment of foreign debts for one year was "executive double-crossing."

The statement said congress was "hit below the belt" by the offer and the president had "usurped unto himself the legislative functions of congress," since "in our day national expression is authoritative only when the representatives of the people have taken proper action."

Representative LaGuardia's statement follows in part:

"The president of the United States, having made an official offer to the nations of the world, congress will ratify that promise by enactment of necessary legislation.

"It is only fair to say, however, that seldom has the American congress been subjected to such executive double-crossing. The deferment of debt payments, like any fiscal matter under our form of government, is a legislative function of the highest degree.

"The president admits his proposal requires congressional action. That being so, he had no right to pledge the American people before proper congressional action had been taken. By so doing he hit congress below the belt and usurped unto himself not only the legislative functions of congress, but attempts to make personal, like in the old food administration days, a matter which is purely national.

"In our democracy, national expression is authoritative only when the representatives of the people have taken proper action. The fact that a few members of the house and senate were in a sort of way consulted, does not meet constitutional requirements. . . .

"With the exception of Senators Borah, of Idaho, and Wagner, of New York, there was not a progressive consulted. The president gathered unto him a group of republican 'yes men' to satisfy his constitutional conscience. . . .

"Foreign governments will no doubt adjust themselves to the president's offer and congress will not victimize them because of our presidential foibles. But congress will surely take most drastic action, not only to alleviate domestic conditions and eliminate future breadlines, but also to give expression as a notice that hereafter foreign debt policies, as all fiscal matters, must come from the proper constituted constitutional authorities."

Hawley Formulating 'Model U. S. Tax Law'

ASTORIA, Ore., June 21.—(AP)—Congressman W. C. Hawley, chairman of the house ways and means committee, has announced he is working on a "model tax law for the entire United States."

Hawley's announcement followed his denial of rumors he did not intend to seek re-election next year.

"During my 24 years in congress," Hawley said, "I have had two ambitions. One, to write a tariff, and the second, to write a model tax law for the entire United States. The first has been accomplished and I am now working on the second—a law to apportion the burden among all taxpayers and those who should pay taxes."

CONSTANCE BENNETT REPORTED IMPROVED

THE TRAGEDY OF HOOVER.

"The Tragedy of Herbert Hoover" is the title of an article by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, published in the current issue of that weekly. Excerpts from it appear elsewhere in this issue.

In view of the certainty that President Hoover will again be the republican presidential candidate next year it is quite in the order of politics that his record in the presidency should be evaluated meticulously by both his proponents and his opponents. He cannot expect to be immune from ample criticisms, but is entitled because of respect for his office and his eminent representative personality to legitimate and plausible comment.

It is to his credit and that of the national character that Mr. Hoover's integrity as a man is not involved in the criticisms of his official career as president. In that position all matters relating to policies and actions are subjects for legitimate valuation. Mr. Villard is an experienced political observer, an acute and caustic critic, and independent of partisan obligations—emphatically a free lance.

He thinks, as most observers do, that Mr. Hoover is more to be pitied than castigated for the revelation of his ineptitude as an executive leader, his demonstrated lack of constructive statesmanship, his sufferance of irresponsible partisan control, his want of courage to fight for his own proclaimed convictions, and his ineffective efforts to sail the ship of state steadily in the midst of a devastating economic storm.

It is for these unexpected phenomena in the presidential record of Mr. Hoover that Mr. Villard arraigns him before the bar of public judgment. The charges in the indictment are warranted by the obvious facts of record, and Mr. Hoover and his backers cannot escape answering them to the people. Demurrers and "exculpatory affidavits" from the principal and his accessories will not satisfy the popular demand to know the why of the manifest failures of Mr. Hoover to redeem his campaign promises and to fight for the reforms and benefits he told the people they should have.

Since he is to again lead the republican party, and it seems now that no one in it has the spirit and courage to contest that leadership, there will be other and more virulent criticisms of Mr. Hoover's actions and failures. That he was a great idol of hope when the people gave him his unprecedented majority in 1928 is remembered the more strangely that he is now so pitifully deflated while yet upon his pedestal.

THE COTTON WEEK EFFECTS.

Merchants' reports to the department of commerce and other information agencies, especially the reports from the south and west, show that "National Cotton Week" had a general fine effect in promoting the use of cotton goods. In the line of clothing for men and women some sections report a conspicuous use of cotton fabrics.

The wearing of garments made from cotton should be stimulated, particularly in the south where the climate invites such use. There will be nothing novel in the spectacle, for in earlier days such clothing of the person was general in this region.

The modern processes of manufacture produces fabrics that "his honor" or "milady" can use with the highest taste and comfort. The use of such textile cloths for the children of the family will soon affect the elders, convincing them that they also can use such fabrics without depreciation and with large economic profits.

This year many graduating classes in our high schools and colleges for girls featured cotton fabrics for their commencement ceremonies, to the delight of all who beheld them so arrayed, and the white cotton suit for men is now in general summer use.

The men of the south, by showing their favor for clothing made from cotton fabrics, can set a fashion that will spread over the land and go far to increase the popularity and prosperity of our cotton manufacturers. The urge to set that fashion should be felt and followed from one border of the south to the other.

A COMMON MOTOR CODE.

The division of "street and highway safety" of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs will submit to the general assembly, through Mrs. Henry M. Bird, the committee chairman, a strongly indorsed request for highway safety legislation.

Through action by the department of commerce at Washington highway experts of the nation have compiled and recommended a "uniform vehicle code," which provides uniform registration of motor vehicles, uniform licensing of operators of such vehicles, and uniform traffic regulations.

This code is being adopted in other states and there is a general feeling that it should be adopted in Georgia, a state peculiarly situated for interstate motor traffic, and therefore largely to be benefited by the use of the uniform code.

The rapid increase of bus and truck traffic between the states far and wide argues undeniably for the regulation of that traffic upon uniform terms. A recent conflict of tag requisitions of Georgia and Indiana is an illustrative case. The adoption of uniform terms of traffic by motor vehicles will make their general employment easier and safer in all respects.

There is no valid reason why such regulation that necessarily cannot reasonably be confined and wholly subjected to varying state codes, should not be rapidly put upon the terms of the approved uniform code which will be recommended to the legislature this summer.

THE BAR AND THE BARS.

The Tennessee Bar Association, following the lead of like associations in other states, notably in Virginia, recommend the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The conviction is growing among jurists and lawyers circumstanced to know the truth, that the prohibition policy of the nation is producing more lawlessness, crime and social demoralization than it is sobriety and social benefits.

The policy of national prohibition is losing favor rapidly. Men and women of high character and influence, in nowise interested in promoting liquor drinking and liquor trading, are combining over the country to bring about another and more practical treatment of the liquor problem than that of the Volstead act. They are as sincerely desirous of a sober people as is Bishop Cannon, Mrs. Boole or any other professional prohibitionist, but they do not see any highly visible advance toward national sobriety so far made by the Cannon-Boole eighteenth amendment policy.

The people at large are waking up to the incontestable failure of that policy and to the enormous criminal and social evils it has brought upon the nation. Just as surely as the American people have often righted themselves from an obvious wrong position so surely may they be expected to soon seek a new solution of the liquor problem.

It is too early yet to say what their majority plan of substitution will be, but it is not too early to predict that the present Volsteadism will remain unamended and unmodified indefinitely. The issue of the ability of the people to protect themselves from liquor itself and from the lawlessness of defiant bootleggers and racketeers must be settled in the interest of law, order and morality, and that soon. The bar associations are breaking the way toward a sane settlement of that vital issue.

New drouth fears come from the northwest. It may be Nature's way of scorching common gumption into the farmers.

The pope says children belong to the church; Mussolini says they belong to the state; but America says they belong to their parents.

Unless the thermometer takes a tumble to itself there will be a hot time in this old town while the legislature is in session.

The Arkansaw short-stop divorce law is now in effect and the misallied are hot-footing out to Hot Springs.

The president should try to keep cool this summer. That of next year is going to be a scorcher.

It seems that all those republicans could reply to President Hoover was: "We hear'd you!"

The prohis will begin their great drive on July 15, but what are they going to drive at?

Watermelons have come to town. Also a fresh supply of paregoric.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Hussein of The Hedjahs.

Most remarkable of all the personalities connected with the Near East during this century was ex-King Hussein, of the Hedjaz, whose death occurred in exile at Amman, Transjordania. His funeral took place at Jerusalem in the shadow of the Dome of the Rock. Hussein's life story might well have filled a page in the "Arabian Nights." Born in Constantinople 77 years ago, he was a direct descendant of the mighty Caliph Ali, son-in-law of the Prophet Mahomet. He became grand sherif of Mecca state. His opportunity came during the war, when he threw in his lot with the Allies, and the brilliant cooperation of his forces paved the way for Lord Allenby's victories in Palestine. Hussein caught all the diplomats napping when he proclaimed himself king. He invited them one day to take afternoon tea with him at Jeddah.

After a little conversation the grand sherif dropped a bombshell by proclaiming himself king. His diplomatic guests were unable to consult with each other as to the proper attitude to be taken and sat on sipping their tea in silence. Before the end of 1916 Hussein was formally recognized by the Allies as the king of the Hedjaz. When his dream of ruling over a united Arabia reached the ears of fierce Ibn Saud, the leader of the Wahabi tribesmen organized a revolt and supplanted Hussein himself. When the war came Hussein was heavily subsidized by Great Britain in order that a revolt in the Hedjaz might embarrass the Turco-German command. He is said to have received more than six million dollars.

At one time he was paid $30,000 a month in gold not to attempt to upset the Zionist experiment in Palestine, it was said by the "News of the World," a statement which I do not believe for a minute. What became of his money is a mystery, but it is related that when he left Jeddah to go into exile in Cyprus in 1924, he took with him several ponderous trunks full of British sovereigns. In Cyprus people refused to believe Hussein when he declared he was penniless. The legend grew that he had a great hoard of gold, and that every night at midnight, after prayers, he made his way with a candle to a dark cellar. There it was declared, he squatted and greedily counted his gold which he kept in petrol tins. Hussein was the father of King Feisal, of Irak, the Emir Abdullah of Transjordan and Ali ex-king of the Nejd.

Troublesome Big Business.

The subject of the American underworld continues to be a never-failing fount of material for the picturesque journalist in "King Crime," a book just out in London. Collinson Owen, who has an agreeable style, presents us with an up-to-date picture of the big shots of Uncle Sam's rogues' gallery. He has ably digested the voluminous literature built 'round Al Capone and his like and he recalls to our memory the masterly municipal plunderer, Tweed, whose rake-off in the squeeze of city funds in New York ran into millions.

There are rogues, bandits and gunmen in Europe, but they are small fry compared with the "stars" of the United States. A million men and women feverishly occupied in crime; 12,000 murders, 100,000 holdups and 500,000 burglaries a year, blackmail to the tune of a billion dollars and more extorted by racketeers and their cohorts of thugs; murderous beer barons who live in palaces on the strength of their fear-extorted gains. These are some of the thuggery statistics Mr. Owen writes about.

A Real Crucifixion.

Parisians may soon be called upon to witness a public crucifixion on the Place de la Concorde. That is, if the famous Oriental fakir, Tahra Bey, has his way. The fakir, in answer to a challenge by Paul Heuze, the Harry Houdini, of France, has just made thte startling announcement that he intends to prove that he is immune to pain and physical suffering.

"I will have a cross erected at the entrance of the Champs Elysees," says Tahra Bey in his defiant proclamation to M. Heuze. "Exactly on the spot where the guillotine functioned during the revolution and where King Louis and Queen Marie Antoinette were beheaded. I am willing to be nailed to the cross. The only specification I make is that in driving the nails through my hands and feet no bones are broken. I must be taken down after two hours. I will then demonstrate in the presence of a committee of medical men that I am capable of healing the wounds by a simple word of command."

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

The Supreme Court Decision in Those Celebrated Naturalization Cases.

Considerable discussion is going on in the country over the decision of the United States supreme court that aliens unwilling to take the naturalization oath of allegiance to the United States and to "support and defend the constitution," without reservations, are not entitled to citizenship.

Professor McIntosh and Miss Bland would reserve the right of conscience to decide for themselves whether a war of the United States would be a righteous one which they could conscientiously approve.

The supreme court decided that such right of choice whether or not to support a war of the nation cannot lawfully be allowed, since it is not the right of a native-born citizen.

* * * *

The Decision Is Wholesome.

It would be absurd in the highest degree for any other rule than that set forth by the court to prevail in this country.

This country belongs to its people and by every rule of right—especially of good conscience—the people, without other than obvious exceptions, should be bound in law and morals to preserve and defend it.

It was decided early in our history that while this is a nation of people with Christian culture, the government was not founded upon the tenets of Christianity.

Certainly, it has never practiced them as the gospel of its social or political life.

A decision that any citizen can refuse to go to war for the nation because his conscience is against it would be worse than a decision that the government can maintain no army or navy. It would leave the nation naked.

* * * *

Conscience Versus Sovereignty.

There are plenty of equitable reasons for excluding from citizenship those who would set up their own sovereignty over that of the state. There must be one sovereignty only and it supreme in the state.

And conscience is not fit to be that sovereign.

The supreme court decided that emphatically in the Mormon-polygamy case.

Conscience is not an infallible moral guide, as we learn from that greatest of spiritual philosophers, St. Paul, who spoke of consciences "seared as with a hot iron" and useless as moral guides.

Conscience is subject to education. It can be ignorant, superstitious, and vitiated. There is scarcely any faculty men possess that can be so easily lied about as "conscience." The bootlegger's conscience approves his trade.

* * * *

A Five-to-Four Decision.

In discussing this naturalization case much stress is laid upon the fact that the court was divided—five judges against the applicants and four favoring them.

But what of that? The court was constituted to have an uneven number of judges with the right to the majority to make its decisions.

We have had in our history many five-to-four decision. Some of the most vital cases affecting individual rights and national policies have been decided by five judges against four.

If the court was of seven judges we would still have four-to-three decisions, and if of five judges we would have three-to-two decisions. So there is no sensible argument in saying that the decision was "a one-man decision." That is extremely silly.

* * * *

A Fanatic in the Pulpit.

That Brooklyn preacher who dragged the supreme court decision into his pulpit last Sunday exemplified how far fanaticism can go in interpreting Christian principles. He said that "if Christ were here and applied for citizenship to the supreme court would tell Him that He was not desirable as such!"

If Christ were here He quite likely would not apply for naturalization as an American citizen. He did not apply to become a Roman citizen, though Rome was ruling His native country. He probably knew that Rome would have the right to conscript Him into her army, though we have no record that she did that to any Jew.

But St. Paul did become a Roman citizen. He purchased that citizenship "with a great price," and so appealed to Caesar and prolonged his life. The Brooklyn preacher's reference to Christ was fanatical.

Easy to Escape Fighting.

Professor McIntosh came over into the United States to improve his condition in life. He obtained a high teaching post in a famous American university. He is well paid, well fed and doubtless enjoys being tagged as a full-fledged American. But he doesn't want to be subject to any call to war.

His proper role then is to remain here as a privileged Canadian, able on a declaration of war to hop back to Canada over night. There he would be immune from any duty to fight for the United States.

And if Canada allows her citizens to elect, on conscience, whether to fight for her or not, he will be safe to look on from afar and see other men dying for his protection.

The Tragedy of Herbert Hoover

BY OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD.
(In The Nation)

Yes, Mr. Hoover's position is nothing less than tragic. If he is the sensitive, proud, and high-minded man that his intimate friends have certified him to be, it must seem to him that in his case the road to glory has led but to despair. For years he planned and worked and schemed—and stooped—to achieve the greatest gift the American people can bestow. It has turned to ashes in his hands. Not in my 34 years of journalistic experience has any president so failed to impress or to win the public. He is a tragic figure, one to be pitied; and his own unhappiness appears mirrored in every counterfeit presentment which reaches an entirely unresponsive public. Unless he is utterly deluded he must know that he has failed in his task, that the bulk of his fellow-citizens regard him with indifference, and that large numbers of them have identified him with the economic disaster which has come upon the nation.

Let it be said at the outset that Mr. Hoover is in considerable part the victim of circumstances. It is wrong and unjust to hold him entirely responsible for the unemployment and economic confusion. Both would have come if the smooth and smug Calvin Coolidge had remained in office. It is a worldwide depression, and the ablest minds here and in Europe believe that no nation can work out of it by itself; that joint action alone can restore the normal processes of manufacture, barter, and exchange. But Mr. Hoover, after coming back from the peace conference a democrat to the extent of running successfully in the democratic presidential primary in Michigan and of supporting to the full President Wilson, especially in his advocacy of the League of Nations, joined the republican party. As a republican he cannot complain if the country, after being taught for generations that prosperity inevitably comes with and through the republicans, now holds his party responsible for the bad times. He himself boasted during his pre-election campaign that the nation had progressed from the full dinner pail to the full garage. How shriveled must he feel when he rereads his speech of acceptance of the republican nomination on August 11, 1928, in which he declared that we were reaching "one of the oldest and perhaps the noblest of human aspirations . . . the abolition of poverty." By poverty, he explained, "I mean the grinding of undernourishment, cold, and ignorance, and fear of old age of those who have the will to work."

As if this was not enough, he continued in these striking words: "There is no guaranty against poverty equal to a job for every man. This is the primary purpose of the economic policies we advocate." Can he justly complain if he finds himself, less than three years later, held responsible for the six or seven millions of unemployed who are now confronted, not with "the abolition of poverty," but with absolutely empty dinner pails, and are facing "undernourishment, cold, and ignorance, and fear of old age"?

But if the major responsibility for the panic is not his, there are minor responsibilities for which he can be and is justly held responsible. His treasury department and the federal reserve could have put some brakes on the stock exchange speculation long before the crash. He could have refused to put out, and to allow his cabinet ministers to put out, those endless misleading statements on the character of the crisis and the amount of unemployement. No matter how innocent he was of responsibility for the evil times, there was no wisdom or common sense in his assuring his fellow-countrymen on March 8, 1930, that the unemployment was little more than seasonal and that there was every prospect that the depression would be over in two months. Deceiving your fellow-countrymen is no way to end economic distress!

Mr. Hoover is in another sense the victim of circumstances. We are witnessing the collapse not merely of one but of several political philosophies. We are beholding as well the breakdown of an entire social system. It matters not whether there will be one or many recoveries, or how soon prosperity will reappear; for some political legends are now wholly shattered, and when this panic ends not all the king's horses or all the king's men will put Humpty-Dumpty exactly together again.

Mr. Hoover is also to be pitied because his own theory of governing has broken down. His plan of government by commission has achieved only ridicule in the case of the Wickersham body; his other commissions have so far merely acted as lightning arresters, like his committee on unemployment, whose chairman, Colonel Arthur Woods, has finally run off to Europe in despair. His excellent plan for the reorganization of the government in Washington has come to nothing, partly because of congressional indifference, and partly because of Mr. Hoover's own inability to challenge public interest and drive things through. His method of improving conditions within a trade by action of the trade itself under government leadership succeeds here but fails there. One business after another breaks down under his eyes: the rubber business, the oil business, the sugar business, the grain business, and numerous others. Without knowing whither such a policy may lead, these great industries each clamor for a czar and the right to fix prices and act unitedly without the slightest regard for the anti-trust laws. Yet Mr. Hoover does not himself come out for the anti-trust laws or against them. Men looked to him to achieve great administrative reforms because he was an engineer. They looked to him for extraordinary sympathy for the suffering and unemployed, only to find that he is willing that the unemployed should starve, but not that the American policy of refusing them any government aid which might be called a dole should be abandoned. Men thought that he would help us to an intelligent foreign policy, especially in relation to Europe. They have seen his Geneva disarmament conference break down and his London disarmament conference end disappointingly for lack of strong leadership and a clear-cut program. Men thought that he, a Quaker, might be relief upon to check ou growing militarism, but under him, the Quaker, the aggrandizement of the military has gone on apace, until our military and naval forces have become a menace to American liberties. At least men thought that under his engineering and administrative skill waste, inefficiency, and extravagance would be cut out of the budget; only now, a year and a half after the Wall Street crash, with a deficit of $1,250,000,000 at hand, does he suddenly realize that there are $25,000,000 to be saved here, and $20,000,000 there, when in one department at least the savings could run to two hundred millions—a Washington daily newspaper recently declared that the commission on reforms and retrenchment in the war department had so decided.

What is it that has brought about this debacle in Herbert Hoover? Viewing him as calmly as my nature and judgment permit, it seems to me that what is chiefly undoing him is lack of courage; or to put it more severely, cowardice. Why is it when Herbert Hoover took office under real obligations to no man, when he was elected by the most tremendous sweep in our history, that he has not dared say his soul was his own; that he has made such indefensible appointments, that he has let himself be represented in the senate by a Jim Watson, has frequently surrounded himself by wretched advisers, cheap and discredited politicians, and has appointed a cabinet whose general average of mentality and ability is extraordinarily low? No one whom I know can give the answer. Why, for example, should the president have sent to one of the European countries as representative of the United States a man whose sole qualification was that he felt that he was entitled to a job (although a very rich man) because of his campaign contributions (he is today practically never at his post)? True, Mr. Wilson did similar things, and so have other presidents; but why should an engineer, a man of great business efficiency, a tried administrator and executive, follow such bad examples?

Yes, it is cowardice at bottom. Man after man comes from the White House and declares privately that he is certain that Mr. Hoover would personally like to recognize Russia, but feels that he cannot because public opinion is not yet ready for it. But for what is a president there except to organize and lead public opinion in the direction in which his conscience tells him to go? Russia is but one example of many. It is impossible to avoid the belief that Mr. Hoover constantly does violence to his better self, that he knows better than his actions suggest, that at bottom his conscience troubles him. Like almost every other politician the world over, he has frequently disavowed his own beliefs, and has compromised deeply and often—as in the matter of signing the latest inexcusable tariff, which he solemnly told congress he never, never would sign, and then did sign. By that action he contemptuously brushed aside the sound and considered judgment of more than a thousand of the country's leading economists, scholars, and men of affairs who besought his veto. Yet the still, small voice plainly troubles him—let him be credited with that, for better, for worse. But take his courage in both hands he rarely can. No more than a Watson or a Tilson does he perceive the simplest and plainest of all political truths—that the country honors nothing so much as bravery in its public men. No, he is as timid as the timidest, and all the time the second-term specter follows him about as persistently as Banquo's ghost pursued Macbeth.

What is it that makes so unhappy a man desire four years more of the life he lives in the White House? Pride? Hope that a revival of prosperity before the end of his second term will bring him the cheers of the crowd. The belief that there is one more victory to be had in sticking to the dry side? Determination not to rank behind Washington, Lincoln, Cleveland, Roosevelt, and Wilson, as a one-term president? One would think he would long for rest, for the quiet, peace, and happiness of private life.

Only—the masses had hoped and had longed, and the plain people had wished a real leadership, a new leadership; had dreamed of a man in the White House of whom it could never be said that he truckled or compromised or played the political game. Thus it has come to pass that men everywhere are saying that Mr. Hoover does not wish a newer and a better order, and a newer and juster world. And so the tides of human progress sweep by him and leave him high and dry, a cowering, frightened man in the most beautiful house in America. With the most wonderful opportunity to make himself not only the regenerator and the moral leader of aspiring America, yes, of the whole world, he fears to act, fears to speak out, fears to assume that leadership which could easily write his name and fame upon the imperishable scroll of time.

GRANULATED EYELIDS OR TRACHOMA.

In the north people sometimes call simple chronic inflammation of the eyelids "granulated eyelids," but in the south this name is more commonly applied to trachoma, which is a contagious and dangerous inflammation of the lining of the eyelids. Another common name for trachoma is "red sore eyes."

Trachoma begins with watering, itching and burning, and a feeling as if there were something in the eye. Most victims of trachoma believe their trouble was started by "something in the eye," such as dust, sand, pollen. The sufferer presently finds that sunshine causes pain and he avoids it or begins wearing dark goggles. Presently the eyeballs become inflamed. The transparent cornea becomes clouded and vision becomes poor. Scars form on the lid lining and when the scar contracts, as all scars do, the edge of the lid is pulled inward. This causes the lashes to rub and scratch the eyeball, which is not only painful but it tends to make the transparent cornea cloudier and so partial blindness develops.

Ninety per cent of native Egyptians suffer with trachoma. Twenty-five per cent of Chinese have it. There is much trachoma in Brazil, Syria, Ireland and Russia. Our quarantine officers are very watchful and admit no one to this country if his eyes look suspicious, until they are satisfied the trouble is not trachoma.

Trachoma is a serious economic problem. The partial blindness attending it renders victims incapable of working in many skilled trades. In China trachoma probably causes greater economic loss than floods or famines.

In Missouri 21.7 per cent of 3,200 persons drawing state pensions because of blindness are blind from trachoma.

Poverty, overcrowding, insanitary living conditions, and malnutrition are factors which seem to favor the disease. Perhaps the disease brings about these very conditions in many instances. Trachoma prevails chiefly in West Virginia, Kentucky, eastern Tennessee, western Virginia, Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma. It is very prevalent among the Indian tribes.

The contagion spreads directly from person to person, or by using the same towel, wash basin, handkerchief, and some doctors believe even by shaking hands with a trochoma sufferer.

If you suspect you have trachoma place yourself under medical treatment at once. It requires two or three years of treatment to conquer the trouble and save your sight.

Keep your face clean especially about the eyes. Burn or boil handkerchiefs or cloths used about the eyes. Have your own towel, wash basin, soap and other toilet articles, and permit no one else to use them.

Be careful in cleaning baby's eyes, to use only cloths that have been boiled.

Avoid exposure to dust. If your work is dusty, wear goggles only while at work.

If you wear dark glasses, wear them only when in the sunlight. Glasses cannot cure trachoma. Only prolonged, faithful medical treatment can cure it.

SOUTH SUFFERS FROM HEAT WAVE

cury rose to 98. One death occurred. From available reports, this city was the only one to suffer from abnormally high temperatures.

Rains in Chicago and a wide area of the middle west dissipated the extreme heat. Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, however, still sweltered from summer temperatures.

The return of cooler weather in Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota brought with it damage from high winds and heavy rains. Much farm property and at least three lives were taken by tornadoes.

Some Iowa towns for a time feared floods from streams swollen by the sudden rains.

Fair, cool weather, with the mercury at 84, 13 degrees below the previous day's mark, gave Boston relief. At Montpelier, Vt., the mercury dropped 35 degrees from noon Friday until noon yesterday.

Whatever the Government Gives to Bill Smith Is Taken From John Brown

By Robert Quillen

It is customary to think of veterans of the World War as needy men who deserve government aid.

But veterans are not a distinct class. They are middle-aged men who pay taxes as other people do. Many of them are rich, and many more are well-to-do.

Thus veterans as a class play a double role. As men who served their country they receive compensation, and as present taxpayers they provide the money to compensate themselves.

Of course the prosperous ones pay more and receive less, but the point is that any money received from the government by one veteran makes taxes higher for all of the others.

That is fair enough if the one who receives the money really deserves it; but in an ever-increasing number of cases the money is not deserved, and unless the veterans themselves do something to discourage this raiding of the treasury, they as well as others must resign themselves to an ever-increasing tax burden.

Take the matter of war insurance.

At the time of their discharge, most of the veterans had a $5,000 or $10,000 insurance policy. Many of them continued to pay the premiums and kept the insurance in force. Many did not.

If a veteran who kept his insurance in force becomes totally disabled, he begins to draw a monthly income and need pay no more.

That is fair and just.

But others who kept their insurance in force and are not disabled can get the same benefits if a jury so decrees.

And still others, who dropped their insurance and are not disabled, can get the money if they can make a jury believe they were totally disabled months or years ago when they allowed their policies to lapse.

Therefore, thousands of them, desperate and out of work, are bringing suit in federal courts to get this easy money.

Lawyers take the cases for as little as 10 per cent of the money obtained. In one district a single lawyer has 485 cases.

At the last term of court, where most of the cases were decided against the government, the judge refused to let two cases go before a jury. "Neither of these men has any case," said he, "but they are jobless and have families to support, and the jury would give them the money out of sympathy."

That is the story in a nutshell. Juries composed of poor men will give a poor man government money nine times in ten.

Of course some of the cases are deserving, but most of them are based on need alone.

Are the veterans who pay taxes willing to pay more to help the veterans who need money?

The Conning Tower

BY F. P. A.

Our favorite college for 1931 is Smith, for having invited Mr. Norman Thomas to address its graduating class. The university most likely to succeed is Harvard, which will have a large percentage of its 1930 eleven back next September.

And next year, what with either the success or the failure of the then trip of the American mayors, it is said that a hundred newspaper men will be invited to visit France. Just as our heart began to develop a faint hope murmur, we discovered that the boys who make the trip will be nominated by their editors, and that they will have "an opportunity to compete for a $10,000 prize for the best book describing the trip." Who is giving the prize we don't know. Yet we would be willing to go, if there might be as many as five companionable journalists out of a possible hundred editors' pets. And as for a book describing the trip, we'd write one. We can imagine it now:

CHAPTER III.

You have read in Chapter II that I lost the pot with three nines, Mr. Morris Ernest, of "The New York American," having stood pat on eights and treys, and having bluffed me by betting his stack.

The next afternoon I was next to the dealer, and passed a pair of aces. Mr. Heywood Broun, of "The New York World-Telegram," opened. Mr. Arthur Krock, of "The New York Times," raised fifty, making it seventy to play. Well,——

But there you are. If the editor of the New York Herald Tribune wants to nominate us to be one of 100 journalists guaranteed to refuse to drink no reasonable toast, we are—if we may say so—his huckleberry. And will split even with him on the $10,000 prize, too.

If the books were closed today, Prexy Frank of the University of Wisconsin thinks that the United States would go down in history as a nation strangled by its own success. If the election were held today, Colonel House thinks that the democrats would win. We should like to stage a debate between these two gentlemen as to whether the Cubs of 1908 could defeat the Yankees of 1931.

During the last six months we have read a lot of market letters and annual statements, and we have come to the conclusion that business is bad in inverse ratio to the number of "althoughs" and "howevers" used in market letters and corporation statements.

Epitaph for a Redbird.

Riding the orchard bough,
Tossed on the foam and spray,
Unto the Here and Now
He flung his heart away.
And lost his life in a note
That filled the empty sky,
And died of a song in the throat,
As he would choose to die.

DAVID MORTON.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK.

Hollywood, Cal., June 21.—A star of gardenias 14 feet high marked the head of the runway at Carthay circle when Ina Claire had her first premiere since her return as Ina Claire.

The long runway from the street—a matter of a city block in length—was hung with salmon pink gladioli and huge baskets of the same flowers lined the way on either side of the turkey red carpet. A bank of human adorers stretched from beyond the flowers for a distance of 15 or 20 feet.

And Ina Claire came in the back door of the theater.

It is characteristic of this brilliant beauty that she wouldn't stop to think how much she might mean to all those people waiting out there. It is characteristic of this sophisticated actress that she is rather modern and shy about herself—and quite bashful about the huzzahs waiting for her. And when Lew Cody, as master of ceremonies of the evening, finally called Ina Claire to face the audience, it is in the true picture of this girl that she said with genuine confusion, "For once in my life, I am speechless."

The audience had just seen her in the movie version of "Rebound." It is a talking picture made from the stage play by Donald Ogden Stewart which Ina Claire used as a comeback vehicle at the moment when the world thought Hollywood had her down. She proved to every producer who attended that they had missed the actress of the day. Then just as they were convinced of the fact, she went to the east coast and made "The Royal Family"—then signed the best movie contract given in a long time and returned to a village that had forgotten Ina Claire in Mrs. Jack Gilbert: returned as Ina Claire and intends to stay that way, God bless her.

To those who love their sophistication humanized to a degree, "Rebound" will be a perfect thing. I think in any other actress' hands it would have made a verbose talkie. But Ina Claire knows how to read lines beyond any person playing in talkies just now. Any woman, that is—of course, we have George Arliss here and we have yet to see what Alfred Lunt will do with his lines before a microphone or what Lynn Fontanne will become when the transformer is finished with her.

I almost forgot to tell you what Ina Claire wore—she was completely in brilliants set in a sort of dull silver mesh. She is slim as an arum lily and this gown—prohibitive to most figures, accentuated her blonde loveliness. A cluster of white orchids with deep purple centers was tucked carelessly into the corsage. Without fern, without feathers, and as nonchalantly handled as though they were a knot of primroses—they were worn with the distinction which this girl achieves with every gesture.

An ivory evening cloak was collared and cuffed in chinchilla. The sleeves were short, a trying but very smart effect. The cast was excellent—Bob Ames as the lover being especially good. But I am a specie of Claire fan, and I just can't help harping on the star.

MAN WHO AIDED LAW SLAIN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP)—Jacob Kaufman, said by officials to have aided them in a grand jury investigation into alleged labor racketeering among motion picture operators, was shot to death early today.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Bellows immediately ordered the arrest of Thomas Maloy, head of the Chicago Motion Picture Operators' union, and five other men.

The others sought are Danny Stanton, South Side gunman under indictment in Wisconsin for the slaying of Jack Zuta; Ralph O'Hara, an associate of Maloy; Eddie Donovan, Cicero gunman, and Jack Quinn and Ralph La Pointe, union executives.

Although he declined to disclose information he had implicating the men, Mr. Bellows described the slaying as an attempt to embarrass the grand jury's inquiry.

"This is a union killing," he said. "There is no doubt about that. Maloy and his crowd have overstepped themselves this time. The murder will react against them rather than disorganize the grand jury work, as apparently it was intended to do."

Kaufman, a motion picture operator, was shot down as he stood in the entrance of a South Side radio shop, by one of three gunmen who drew alongside the curb in an automobile.

The victim had long been at odds with Maloy and recently led a minority movement to unseat him in favor of Henry Gusenberg, a brother of Frank and Pete Gusenberg, who were slain in the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

The grand jury inquiry was prompted by theater owners who, according to Mr. Bellows and Assistant State's Attorney Charles E. Lounsbury, complained of "high-handed methods" employed by labor officials in forcing them to employ more motion picture operators than was necessary for operation of amusement places.

It is charged, according to Lounsbury, that a high percentage of the salaries of the surplus operators went to Maloy himself.

The prosecutors have asked for the indictment of heads of the union charging conspiracy in restraint of trade and violation of a city ordinance governing the licensing of operators.

Commenting on Stanton's connection with the case, both Mr. Bellows and Mr. Lounsbury said they had information that union funds had paid for Stanton's defense in his fight to escape extradition to Wisconsin to face trial for Zuta's murder.

BODY OF RUM RUNNER FOUND ON BOULEVARD

DETROIT, June 21.—(AP)—The body of Ben Bronston, 26, known to police as a rum-runner and a former purple gangster, was found in the middle of a boulevard in the northwest section of Detroit at 3 a. m. today.

Bronston had been shot through the head and abdomen. Police found no one in the neighborhood who had heard shots and reasoned that the man was killed elsewhere.

Bronston's police record shows numerous arrests and reveals that he was a gangster at the age of 18.

The killing was the first of the type here in several weeks.

THREE PERSONS HURT IN FORT VALLEY FIRES

One Seriously Injured as Fire Damages Two Large Houses.

FORT VALLEY, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—Two persons were injured, one seriously, in two fires here early Sunday which almost destroyed two large houses.

Frank Fincher, who occupied with Mrs. Fincher an apartment in the home of Mrs. Neltie Miller, received severe burns of the back, arms and legs. After first aid treatment he was taken to the Oglethorpe private infirmary in Macon.

The house, known as the Frank Miller place, was badly damaged. It was formerly occupied by F. O. Miller, a former superintendent of the Masonic Home, in Macon. Mrs. Miller is his daughter-in-law.

Three of the four apartments of the house were occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Fincher, Mrs. Miller and her family, and Mrs. A. J. Houser, a widow. All except Mr. Fincher escaped without injury.

The fire originated in the roof, apparently from electrical wiring, and flames swept to Mr. Fincher's room. Mr. Fincher was awakened. Flames were coming from the roof downward and he had to crawl to the door. On the way he was seriously burned. His groans awakened the other residents of the house and they made their way to safety.

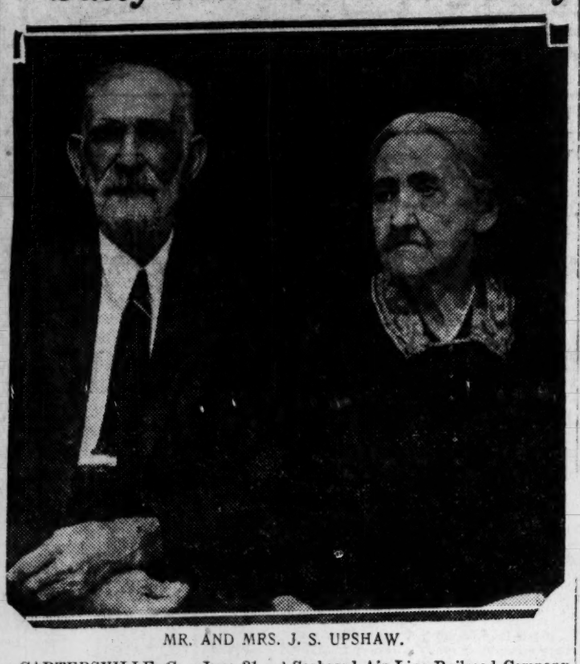

The Miller house caught fire about 3 o'clock Sunday morning. An hour and a half earlier the home of C. P. Singletary, on the other side of town, was badly damaged by fire. Mr. and Mrs. Singletary both were out of town. A Mr. Barnett, who lives across the street, not knowing the family was away, tried to break into the house to give warning, and injured his hands and arms in an effort to break through the glass door. Several stitches were taken in his arm.

EAST MACON WOMAN IS SHOT NEAR HOME

MACON, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Adele Langley, of East Macon, was seriously wounded tonight when she was shot in the chest with a shotgun as she was about to enter her home. As she fell to the ground screaming, passersby stopped, picked her up, and took her to the Macon hospital, where her condition was reported critical tonight.

Police were notified and began a search for Lynn Levarr, East Macon man, who is said by police to have shot Mrs. Langley. Neighbors told police that Levarr ran away from the scene of the shooting and headed for the "swamps" below East Macon. His home is on Jones avenue, East Macon.

Cartersville Couple Wed Sixty Years on Wednesday

MR. AND MRS. J. S. UPSHAW.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., June 21.—An informal celebration will mark the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Upshaw at their home here next Wednesday, June 25.

The marriage was performed in Rockport, Ark., June 25, 1871. The bride was Miss Jennie Floyd, who, with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Floyd, migrated to the then "far west" in search of opportunities in the new land.

Miss Jennie Floyd and Jack Upshaw were sweethearts long before the Floyds moved from Bartow county to Arkansas. For a time, says the bride of 60 years ago, "I did not know whether or not Jack would go way out there for me."

She surely guessed wrong, for it was not long after the Floyds arrived in their Arkansas home, that Jack Upshaw appeared on the scene, his purpose being to claim the hand of his sweetheart and make her his bride.

The years went by. Children came into the home to gladden the family circle. There were six of them. Two have passed on, but there are still living two daughters and two sons. Mrs. S. E. Smith, who resides on Capitol avenue, in Atlanta, and Miss Maude Upshaw, who makes her home here with her parents, are the daughters.

One of their sons is George Upshaw, who has been agent for the Seaboard Air Line Railroad Company at Dawson, for the past 20 years.

The other son, W. Thomas Upshaw, is one of the conductors for the L. & N. railroad, and runs between Atlanta and Etowah. Only recently, he represented his division of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors at the national meeting at Kansas City, Mo. The railroad track passes through Cartersville in the rear of the Upshaw home. Never does Conductor Upshaw pass through without placing himself in position on his train to wave a hand and shout a message of love and affection for his aged parents, who are generally on hand to return the greeting.

Mr. Upshaw is now nearing his 84th milestone, while his devoted companion of three score years will be 83 her next birthday.

Despite advancing years, both Mr. and Mrs. Upshaw are hale and hearty and go about their daily tasks with a hearty vim. Mrs. Upshaw says she is never happier than when going about the home and "keeping house just as I've always done." In the early hours of the morning, Mr. Upshaw works in his garden, and when the weather begins to get too hot, he strolls downtown, meeting friends he has made during a well-spent life, and who count it a privilege to enjoy his company.

VALDOSTA TO OPEN '31 TOBACCO MARKET

Prospects Good Despite Cut in Acreage; 5 Warehouses to Operate.

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 21.—The designation of July 28 as the opening date for the Georgia tobacco market centers interest more keenly than ever on the 1931 crop, and both growers, warehousemen and buyers are expected to be unusually active during the coming week in appraising the crop prospects.

Valdosta will have five sales warehouses in operation during the season, with the general expectation of handling not less than 10,000,000 pounds of the weed. The warehouses will include the B. B. Saunders warehouse, Nat Smith warehouse, Savannah avenue warehouse, all three being located with only a street sperating them. In addition to these the Farmers' warehouse, on River street, will be in operation, although the manager has not yet been announced, and Nat Smith will have the Alliance warehouse open on West Hill avenue as usual.

At this time the crop condition and prospect is regarded, in tobacco circles, as being a fair average. However, it is known that there has been a sharp cut in acreage, approximately 20 to 25 per cent. Some experts think that the cut will not be reflected in the tonnage, to that extent, the claim being that better tobacco will be produced on a smaller acreage and that this will bring a corresponding increase in the average price.

Cartersville Revival.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., June 21.—One of the most successful revival meetings in the history of the First Baptist church, is now in progress there. The preaching is by the pastor, Rev. Guy N. Atkinson, while Arthur Edwards is directing the singing, assisted by Mrs. William T. Townsend and J. F. Kimsey at the pianos.

Hobo Life Soon Palls For Two Vienna Boys

VIENNA, Ga., June 21.—Harry Rigsby and Harry Hudgins, Vienna youths, have returned to their homes vowing that they have had enough of the life of a hobo.

Early in the week they started out to see the world and caught a ride on a Southern railway freight train, getting as far as Valdosta, where they were apprehended by a railroad policeman.

When their identity was revealed their parents were notified and arrangements made for the release and return home.

JUDGE S. P. MADDOX, 73, DIES AT DALTON

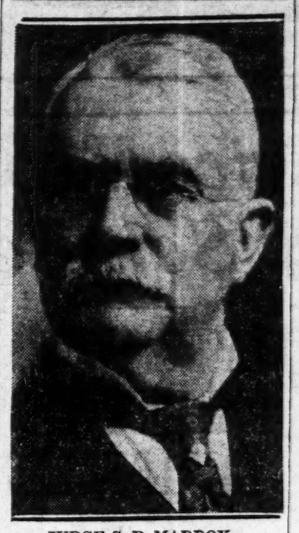

DALTON, Ga., June 21.—Judge Samuel P. Maddox, prominent jurist and north Georgia attorney, died at his home here Sunday afternoon after a lingering illness.

Services will be held at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning at the First Methodist church here with the Rev. W. G. Crawley and Rev. F. K. Sims officiating. Interment will be in West View cemetery. Honorary escorts will be present from the local bar, of which Judge Maddox was dean, and from the Masonic order of which he was a past master.

Judge Maddox was born September 11, 1858, at Tate, Pickens county, Georgia. He was the son of James A. Maddox, a pioneer citizen of north Georgia, and Mrs. Martha Tate Maddox.

He had been prominently identified with the history of north Georgia. His education was in the public schools of Whitfield and Walker counties, later at Shumac, Murray county, and Emory College, Oxford, Ga. He was admitted to the practice of law in 1879 and became one of the leading lawyers of Georgia.

He was elected judge of the superior court of the Cherokee circuit in 1888 to fill the unexpired term of Judge J. C. Fain, his commission being signed by Governor John B. Gordon. He was elected solicitor-general of the Cherokee circuit and served in that capacity for several terms. He served as mayor of the city of Dalton for four terms and as alderman for five terms.

JUDGE S. P. MADDOX.

Judge Maddox was one of the oldest attorneys in point of service of the Southern railway, having been in the legal department of this company for over 50 years, being at the time of his death assistant division counsel.

He was a member of the Methodist church and a member of the board of stewards. He was a member of the Chi Phi fraternity and of the Phi Gamma Literary Society, and of other fraternal organizations.

He was married to Miss Sarah Richardson, of Whitfield county, in 1880, who survives him. To this union seven children were born, of whom five survive: Mrs. W. M. Hardwick, Swift R. Maddox, T. S. Maddox, of Dalton; Mrs. F. J. Parmalee, Louisville, Ky., and Sam T. Maddox, Atlanta.

He is also survived by two brothers, Charles B. Maddox, Atlanta, and Stephen G. Maddox, of Weatherford, Texas, and two sisters, Mrs. Sallie Wrinkle, of Dalton, and Mrs. Martha Pierce, of Eaton, Ga., and seven grandchildren.

Officers Re-elected.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., June 21.—The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Cartersville Building and Loan Association, held on Friday afternoon, heard the reading of the annual audit, prepared by Walter W. Daniel, re-elected the board of directors, and they in turn re-elected all the former officers to serve the organization during the new fiscal year.

Pastor Resigns.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., June 21.—Rev. Richard C. Wilson Jr., who has been pastor of the First Presbyterian church here for the past five years, has tendered his resignation. The congregation will consider the resignation Sunday morning, June 28.

ROUTE 80 PAVING WILL OPEN MONDAY

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—The first section of paving on the eastern end of Route 80, immediately adjacent to Chatham county, will be open for public travel tomorrow morning. It is a mile in length and runs from the county line of Chatham to where the road from Guyton and Pineora in Effingham county connects with Route 80. It will shorten the detour for those traveling Routes 30 and 63 for the present, which is the route for Pembroke, Claxton, Vidalia, and Lyons.

Travel to Statesboro will continue to follow the detour through Springfield and Oliver.

FRATERNAL DELEGATES TAKEN FOR BOAT RIDE

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—Delegates, who arrived here Sunday to attend the third annual convention of the Fifth District Order of Ahepa, were taken on a boat ride that night, marking the opening of the meeting, which ends Tuesday.

Monday morning's session will conclude at noon with a pre-luncheon parade. Mayor Hoynes and A. Andris, president of Solon chapter of the order here, are to deliver the welcome addresses Monday with George Smitzes, deputy supreme governor of the district, responding.

The meeting will be presided over by Dr. G. M. Saliba, supreme governor. John Nichols is general chairman.

Business sessions are to be held at Ahepa hall here in the afternoon and at night. An initiation of the Sons of Pericles is scheduled along with the election of officers. An entertainment program has been arranged.

Tennesseean Drowns.

TRACY CITY, Tenn., June 21.—(AP)—Brosi Marugg, 31, prominent in business and fraternal circles here, drowned in a swimming pool at his farm near Sherwood this afternoon at 4 o'clock. His companion, Wilber Morgan, made a vain effort to save him. His body was recovered half an hour later.

WESTERN UNION AGENT DIES AT THOMASVILLE

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—John William Reed, 64, district commercial agent of the Western Union Telegraph Company, with headquarters in Jacksonville, died in a hospital here today.

Mr. Reed was brought here ill from Monticello, Fla., several days ago to Archbold Memorial hospital. He formerly resided in Philadelphia, where he was district commercial superintendent for the telegraph company, and the body will be sent there Monday.

Two daughters and a sister survive. They are Miss Laura Reed and Mrs. Walter Woodside, both of Philadelphia. The sister, Miss Alice Reed, lives at West Palm Beach, Fla. Mrs. Woodside reached her father's bedside today just a few minutes before he died.

IT HAPPENED IN GEORGIA

Peter G. Hyatt celebrated his eighty-third birthday last week. He celebrated by working the same as usual at the same job he has held for 54 years. He is the postmaster at Ellijay, Ga. He was appointed when Rutherford B. Hayes was president.

A brand-new coffin has been paraded through the streets of Grovetown, Ga. It is offered for sale at whatever price the buyer likes. So far there have been no bidders. The coffin was contributed to a campaign to wipe out the church debt by a casket salesman. Grovetown says, however, the town is so healthy there is practically no demand for coffins.

State Deaths And Funerals

WOODIE MARIAN DEASON.

LUMPKIN, Ga., June 21.—Woodie Marian Deason, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Deason, died at the home of her parents this morning after a brief illness. She is survived by her parents and one sister, Mary Lillie.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home at 11:30 Monday morning, with the Rev. W. A. Huckabee, pastor of the Lumpkin Methodist church, officiating. Interment will be in West Side cemetery.

CHATHAM TO BUILD HIGHWAY TO AIRPORT

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 21.—(AP)—Work will begin practically at once on construction of the new paved highway to Municipal airport, the work to be done by Chatham county following securing of rights-of-way from the White Bluff road to the airport.

The boulevard will be 150 feet wide with a grass plot down the center. It will have a straightaway, three-quarters of a mile long, from the White Bluff road, which is the southern extension of Bull street. The new road will put the field in close contact with the local postoffice and will facilitate the handling of mail thereby. The county will beautiful the roadway on the plan of Victory drive.

FATHER, TWO CHILDREN INJURED IN ACCIDENT

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 21.—J. J. Degunther, of 504 West Warren avenue, Tampa, and his two children, Paul, 9, and Margaret, 15, were injured in an automobile accident this afternoon on the national highway just after crossing the state line into Georgia.

Reports from the hospital where they were brought for treatment indicated that Mr. Degunther's injuries are regarded as serious, though it will be tomorrow before the full extent of the injuries can be determined.

The son and daughter, while painfully hurt, are not regarded as being in a serious condition.

OBJECTION RAISED TO SOME JURY MEN

VALDOSTA, Ga., June 21.—A largely signed petition has been circulated in the Hahira district addressed to the jury commission of Lowndes county, asking that the names of certain citizens of the county be removed from the jury box.

This action comes as the result of the trial of a white man at the May term of the superior court, involving a charge of criminal assault on a young white woman, both families being residents of the Hahira section. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

SERVING BROADER FIELDS

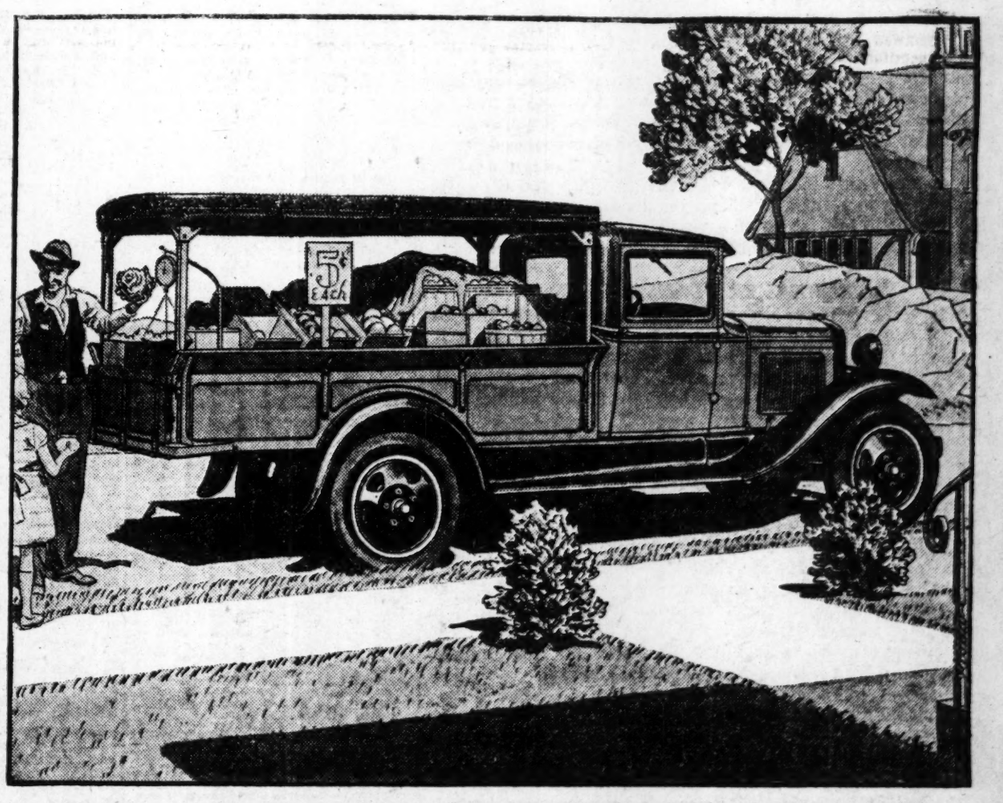

a new light-express body extends the usefulness of

FORD TRUCKS

A GROWING number of standard Ford bodies is being made available for every hauling need. Almost daily, they are extending Ford economy to new business fields.

Among these bodies are stake, panel, platform, express and agricultural types, five different dump and four different coal bodies, two police patrols, a funeral coach, an ambulance, a garbage truck, an ice body, and others. With a wide range of choice in style and equipment, they comprise a full line of more than fifty types.

Ford chassis, too, offer a type for every need. The light-delivery car uses the same chassis as the Model A Ford car. The 1½-ton truck chassis is available with 131½-inch or 157-inch wheelbase. It may be equipped with single or dual rear wheels, and with high or low rear-axle gear-ratios.

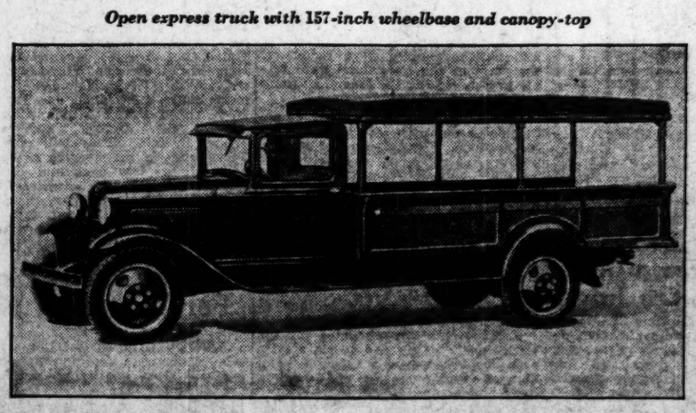

The Light-express Body equipped with Canopy Top. A type widely used by hucksters, vendors, grocers and others, for newspaper and magazine deliveries, and for many other purposes. Made of steel, except for floor-boards and sills, which are of specially seasoned wood. The steel end-gate is equipped with heavy chains. Screen sides can be supplied.

Into the building of both chassis and bodies go fine materials—each selected for its purpose because it has those qualities of strength, toughness, hardness or flexibility which will serve best in that particular capacity. For example, in the making of the chassis alone, forty different kinds of steel are used.

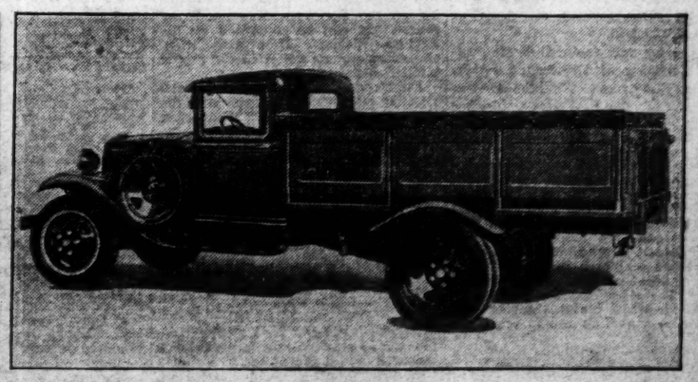

This is but one example of the value that has been built into the Ford truck. These and many other features of value result in completed commercial units that give long, reliable service, capable performance and economy, offering to every business a specialized hauling service at low cost.

Your Ford dealer can supply a chassis and body that are designed for your hauling needs, in a choice of thirty-eight color-combinations. You may purchase a Ford truck or light commercial car on convenient, economical terms through the Authorized Ford Finance Plans of the Universal Credit Company.

Crackers Win Twice From Pels, 6-4, 3-1, To Gain on Lookouts; Stribling and Schmeling Flash Power in Sunday Workouts

Look here, now! What does this mean?

The Crackers won a double-header from the Pelicans in New Orleans. That makes five games out of the last six. Has that winning streak started? Come on, Crackers!!

The double-header victory, coming on the heels of Johnny Dobbs' restoration to duty before his suspension was out and the award of the attendance cup to Atlanta means something. The depression is over; prosperity has come at last!

HOW STRIBLING WILL FIGHT MAX.

In the Sunday Constitution Ralph McGill, the Sage of Geauga and the Shadow of Stribling since he began training, presented a sensible, sagacious forecast and how W. L. Stribling II will wage his warfare against Champion Schmeling the night of July 3.

Mack quoted Pa as advising W. L. to try for a knockout in the early rounds. "There is no reason to start cautiously against Schmeling," was the laconic way Pa put the matter.

Failing in stretching the German on the canvas in the early rounds, Stribling will shift into intermediate gear and win as many rounds as he can and muster all his power for a whirlwind finish. Observer McGill gathered this opinion, no doubt, from close communion with the elder Stribling, who knows every twitch of his son's nostrils.

THE STRIBLING SYSTEM.

This procedure has been the standard Stribling attack for years.

The boy went after Jack Sharkey just that way; he carefully "built up" Jack for the "buckshot" right and tried for four rounds to land it cleanly. Jack was too smart a boxer to be put away with it.

Then Strib, favoring his ailing left arm, worked for points until the ninth. In that round Strib opened up with everything he had and nailed Jack hard; but Jack managed to weather the attack and actually finished stronger by landing a hard stomach blow just as Strib came out for the tenth.

That Stribling lost the decision was one of the major crimes of boxing; he surely deserved the verdict in the opinion of more than one critic.

He went after Von Porat and Scott with that same idea and they fell early kayo victims. He fought just that way against Tuffy Griffiths, but Tuffy fought in a shell of defensive gloves all the way and rode through ten rounds.

It is pretty safe to guess that Stribling will spend the early rounds trying to plant a knockout on the German. Failing, he will step out to left jab enough points to stay on top and save his strength to burn up in a blazing finish.

STRIB NEVER PLANS FIGHTS.

"Do you ever make a plan of battle before you get into the ring?" I asked Strib not long ago.

"Never," he replied. "There is no use figuring out what you are going to do because you never know what the other fellow will do. Any plan you make beforehand is a handicap. It is just that much wasted energy.

"Of course you have learned that the fellow has a good right hand or a long left jab or he weaves or fights from a crouch. You make a note of these things and decide that he must be a sucker for left jab or a right uppercut. But as far as mapping out a plan of fighting—it just isn't done.

"After the bell rings the fight kind of makes itself."

That is the word from a smart young fighter.

He can hit hard; he is a clever boxer. Naturally he tried to win early by a knockout and in any event depends on his speed and cleverness to win a decision. That accounts for the Stribling "groove;" but it is not mapped out in advance.

GREETINGS FROM AN OLD TROUPER.

From Cartersville comes the following breezy invitation from Billy Wehle, old-time trouper with the Striblings:

"You and your staff are cordially invited to attend the season's opening of America's representative tent show, Billroy's Comedians, the greatest show on earth for the money, here Monday night. We will dedicate our opening performance to the success of Young Stribling against Max Schmeling, the champion, in Cleveland."

If W. L. goes over like Billroy's Comedians have been getting across for all these years, he will score a knockout in the first round.

Blues, Whites Play To Second Polo Tie

Two picked polo teams from the Governor's Horse Guard and Fort McPherson squads played another 4-to-4 tie game Sunday afternoon at Fort McPherson.

The game was featured by the excellent driving of Lieutenant Baker, of the Blues, and Warrant Officer Shubert, of the Whites. Neither scored, but their accurate placing of the ball on long drives gave their mates several opportunities.

Lieutenant Biddle was the scoring star for the Blues, with three goals. He scored one in the third chukker and two in the fourth, and it was his all-round play in the last period that tied the game.

Lieutenant Moran, of the Whites, scored one goal each in the first, second and third periods. Major Franke scored the other for the Whites in the third, while Major Gaugler gave the Blues a goal in the fourth chukker.

THE LINEUPS.

Women Set To Open Golf Tourney Today

Qualifying rounds for the annual Maier and Berkele trophy tournament will be played at 9 o'clock this morning on the James L. Key municipal course. It will be sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association, and every woman golfer in the city is invited to participate.

First round matches will be played Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock with the other rounds slated for Wednesday and Thursday mornings.

Trophies and prizes will be given to the medalist and to winners and runners-up in each flight.

The players will be grouped into flights of eight each. As many flights as necessary will be formed. Handicaps will not apply.

Mrs. J. C. Wright, chairman of the tournament committee, will be in charge, assisted by H. L. Jackson Jr., professional at the Key course.

CADDIE KILLED.

TOTTENVILLE, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—A 15-year-old caddie was killed instantly at the Mayflower Country Club today when a ball driven from a tee 40 feet away struck him at the base of the skull. Richard Kaiser, Elizabeth, N. J., who drove the ball, was held for questioning.

CRACKERS TAKE PAIR FROM PELS TO HELP RATING

Lookouts Are Closer After Atlanta's 6-4 and 3-1 Triumphs.

NEW ORLEANS, June 21.—Atlanta's Crackers got off to a great start in their invasion of the Pel domain by sweeping today's double-header, which opens a five-game set. The Dobbsmen took a 6-4 decision in the curtain-raiser and came back to win the second, 3-1.

The double victory, coming coincidentally with Chattanooga's twin loss to Little Rock, put the Crackers only two games behind the Lookouts in the race for second place. Birmingham won to go seven games ahead.

SAME SYSTEM.

The Crackers played the same opening in each game, drifting idly into the third inning and then counting once. And they won each with spurts in the sixth inning.

In the first of the pair the invaders held their 1-0 lead until the sixth inning and then hopped on Belve Bean for five runs to sew things up. The Pels countered in each of the last three stanzas, but could do no good.

That sixth inning Barnes opened was a single and all hands advanced when Connatser fumbled Sheehan's attempted sacrifice. Taitt did sacrifice, and Carlyle was intentionally walked to fill the bases. It was a silly move, as things turned out. Shirley and Autry singled in succession to send three runs in, and after Shirley had been tagged out at the plate on Chapman's effort, Ryan tripled to send two more runners home. That was all, but it was plenty. The blow drove Bean to the showers and Dacus stepped to the mound to whiff Bunny Hearn.

NOT ENOUGH.

The Pels earned one each in the seventh and eight frames, and put an error with three hits for two runs in the ninth, but they got no further.

Andy Messenger took the honors in the second game, letting the Pels down with four hits in the seven innings which were played before darkness set in.

He got his help via the system. His mates got their one run in the third frame, Andy scoring it himself by singling, going down on a sacrifice and coming home on "Poco" Taitt's single.

And the sixth rolled by again, yielding two runs for the Crackers this time. Shirley singled with one out and Martin duplicated with two gone. Ryan's single scored Shirley. Messenger hit to Knothe, who fumbled long enough to let Martin cross the plate.

The Pelicans got to Messenger for a run in their half of the sixth on a walk, a hit batsman and a single, but were halted there.

Johnny Ryan stepped away to lead the Cracker batting attack, getting four hits in seven trips to the plate, scoring one run and batting in three others.

Feather Crown Bout Postponed to July 1

BAYONNE, N. J., June 21.—(AP)—the world's featherweight championship bout between Bat Battalino and Irish Bobby Brady, scheduled for Wednesday night, has been postponed for one week and will be held July 1.

Promoters of the match said Battalino had found it impossible to get down to the class limit of 126 pounds and had asked for an additional week to get rid of excess poundage.

ACES TO CLASH AT WIMBLEDON

All Tennis Titles Open as British Meet Starts Today.

WIMBLEDON, England, June 21.(AP)—The green turf of Wimbledon is ready for the 1931 British lawn tennis championships, starting tomorrow.

By the night of July 4 an entirely new set of champions will have been crowned. Helen Wills Moody and Big Bill Tilden are letting the women's and men's singles titles go by default. Only John Van Ryn, of the champion doubles combination of Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, is here for this year's play. The women's doubles team of Mrs. Moody and Elizabeth Ryan, winners in 1930, also is broken up and so is the mixed doubles combination of Miss Ryan and J. B. Crawford, of Australia.

The class of some American entrants is as unknown to Wimbledon as that of players from the far corners of the world. Sidney Wood, of New York, used to shock Wimbledon mildly by playing in white knickers instead of the conventional flapping flannels of old England, but Wood is grown up now and so is his tennis.

America's new star, Frank Shields, of New York, is an unknown quantity on Wimbledon's turf. He will meet P. D. B. Spence, of South Africa, in the curtain raiser on the famous center court tomorrow.

Henri Cochet, French ace who has had only a couple of days' practice here, meets Nigel Sharpe, of Great Britain, tomorrow.

With her battery of six men stars, Frederick Perry, H. W. (Bunny) Austin, John S. Olliff, J. Colin Gregory, H. G. N. Lee and George Patrick Hughes, and three girl aces, Betty Nuthall, Eileen Bennett Whittingstall and Phyllis Mudford, Great Britain looks forward at last to winning some of the honors that have been going abroad for many years.

It is doubtful whether America can repeat the clean sweep of last year, but Shields, Wood, George Lott, Van Ryn and Gregory Mangin are an able team, while Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., may fill Mrs. Moody's place if she can whip Miss Nuthall.

Tri-State Net Meet Play To Open Today

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 21.—(AP) Tennis stars from all sections of the mid-south assembled here today for the start of the annual tri-state tennis tournament at the Memphis Country Club tomorrow.

The entry list of nearly 100 names included some of the south's outstanding net men. Heading the list of competitors for the men's sigles title will be Cliff Sutter, New Orleans, and Donald Cram, Nashville, Tenn. Sutter, fifth in national rankings, is an outstanding favorite.

Other entries regarded as contenders are Billy Hughes, Memphis, who last week at Jackson won the Mississippi singles title for the third time; Al Tarpley, Tampa, Fla., and Kenneth Cram, younger brother of Donald, another Nashville entry.

Eight events are scheduled for the tournament. They are men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles, junior singles and doubles, boys' singles and mixed doubles.

Beatrice Bryan, of Enterprise, Miss., will defend her title in the women's singles and will pair with Hughes in an effort to retain the mixed doubles championship.

ROBY'S ARENA OPENS TONIGHT

Obie, Bush Clash in Feature of Colored Fight Card.

Promoter Cleve Roby will open his new outdoor boxing and wrestling arena at Cain and Courtland streets tonight with what he believes is one of the best colored ring cards ever offered fight fans in Atlanta.

Bearcat Obie and Willie Bush will come to blows in the 10-round main event, and are expected to stage a great battle.

Cowboy Kid, somewhat of a favorite in Atlanta because of his whirlwind attack, will be pitted against Tiger Thomas, of Chattanooga, in the semi-windup.

The preliminaries will see action in the form of three good battles. Roscoe battles Hooper, Moon meets Rolax, and the opening bout will find these dusky clowns, Jack Raford and Lightning Howard, in an effort to both out-fight and out-antic the other.

The show will open promptly at 8:30 o'clock with a battle royal. Popular prices prevail, and ladies will be admitted free.

Ryder Cup Teams Bothered by Heat

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 21.—(AP). Old Sol worried King George's expeditionary forces far more today than Captain Walter Hagen's wrecking crew as they prepared for their Ryder cup matches with the Americans over the Scioto course.

Direct from the British Isles, where they donned jackets to escape the chilly blasts of typical fall weather, the golfing Britons ran into the most scorching heat spell of the year.

The mercury flirted with the century mark and promised to be just as relentless during the international team matches Friday and Saturday. Even the 13 Americans, who fight it out for the four remaining berths on Sir Walter's team tomorrow and Tuesday, wilted during their drills today.

Captain Whitcombe and his mates will get a gallery seat tomorrow and Tuesday as the 13 Americans struggle for berths on the team. The rivals for extra places are William Burke, New York; Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Henry Ciuci, Bridgeport, Conn.; Ed Dudley, Wilmington, Del.; Olin Dutra, Los Angeles; Johnny Golden, New York; Charles Hilgendorf, Detroit; Willie Klein, New York; Densmore Shute, Cleveland; Joe Turnesa, New York; Frank Walsh, Chicago; Al Watrous, Detroit, and Craig Wood, Buffalo. They will play 18 hole rounds in the morning and afternoon of the two days and the low scorers will join the American team of Captain Hagen, Horton Smith, Al Espinosa, Johnny Farrell, Leo Diegel, and Gene Sarazen, who were invited to compete without tests.

Women Golfers Play For Tennessee Title

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 21.—(AP)—Tennessee's leading women golfers will start qualifying Monday at the Holston Hills Country Club course in the annual state tournament.

Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis, defending champion, is a favorite to win the title again. Mrs. Leon Solomon is a big threat.

NORTH GEORGIA GOLFERS PLAY SECOND ROUND

West End, Ansley and Rome Win on Own Courses.

West End, Ansley Park and Rome were winners Sunday afternoon in the second round of the North Georgia Golf league.

West End, champions of last year, defeated Ingleside, 11 to 1, at West End; Ansley Park turned back Forrest Hills, 15 1-2 to 2 1-2, on the Ansley Park course, and Rome trounced Marietta, 16 to 1, at Rome.

Gene Cook, twice Georgia champion, and Pete Barnes, Junior Chamber of Commerce champion, led the attack for West End. Barnes shot a spectacular 65 for medal honors and paired with Bruce Morgan for best ball honors for the afternoon, at 61.

Cook and Roy Fuss won three points from Monie Ferst and Robert Schwab Sr. Barnes and Morgan won three points from Billy Kingdon and Elliott Haas. T. E. Tolleson and Goat Cochran won 2 1-2 points from Edwin Haas Jr., and Frank Ferst and J. W. Simmons and Johnny Adamson won 2 1-2 points from Arthur Harris and Norman Elsas.

Shooting consistent golf throughout, Ansley Park had little difficulty in defeating Forrest Hills. J. Green and Muggsy Smith won 3 points from Rembert and Griffin; Dan Sage Jr. and J. J. Jones Jr. won three points from Travis Johnson and Tom Stewart; Wagar and Nowell won 3 points from Smith and Croft. Dr. Dan Sage and Ed Merritt won 3 points from Ewing and Hirleman; Perry and Woody won 2 1-2 points from Jordan and McKeithan, and Dr. Wright and Clower won 1 point from Scott and Durant, Forrest Hills.

ROME, Ga., June 21.—The Coosa Country Club golf team swept easily to a 16-1 decision over the Marietta squad here this afternoon in a North Georgia Golf league match. The match had been scheduled for Marietta but was moved to this city.

Mrs. Black, Upton Win Novel Meet.

Mrs. Grady Black and Ed Upton Jr. scored a 5 on the 10th hole to win a three-cornered playoff for honors in a nine-hole mixed Scotch foursome tourney on the Capital City Country Club course Sunday afternoon.

The Mrs. Charlie Black Jr.-John Grant Jr. and Mrs. Appleby-Howard Beckett teams were all square with Mrs. Black and Upton at the end of nine holes with 44s.

The scores follow:
Mrs. Gray Black and Ed Upton Jr., 44.
Mrs. Charlie Black Jr. and John Grant Jr., 44.
Mrs. Appleby and Howard Beckett, 44.
Miss Elizabeth Spalding and Fred Minnich, 45.
Miss L. Haynes and Hugh Nunnally, 46.
Mrs. John Knox and Bill Parker, 46.
Miss Marion Wolfe and Dave Black, 47.
Mrs. E. W. Upton Jr. and Dana Belser, 47.
Mrs. Dave Black and John Knox, 49.
Mrs. Dana Belser and Clark Howell Jr., 49.
Mrs. Dick Sawtell and C. H. Black Jr., 49.
Mrs. Bill Armstrong and Bill Ward, 50.
Mrs. Henry Grady Jr. and Oliver Healey, 51.
Mrs. Oliver Healey and Henry Grady Jr., 51.
Mrs. Bob Jones Sr. and Jack Disosway, 52.
Mrs. Bobby Jones Jr. and Charlie Black Sr., 53.
Mrs. C. B. Nunnally and E. R. Black Jr., 54.
Miss Ann Spalding and Bob Jones Sr., 56.
Miss Margaret Hall and Dick Sawtell, 57.
Mrs. E. R. Black Jr. and C. B. Nunnally, 57.
Mrs. S. Johnson and Grady Black, 57.
Mrs. Jack Disosway and Jack Wright, 63.

West End Golfers Continue Tourney.

West End golfers Sunday completed a number of first-round matches in the club handicap tournament. Second-round play will start this afternoon and continue through the remainder of the week, with the quarter-finals slated for next week.

The results follow:

SECOND FLIGHT.
J. B. McConnell defeated Bob Adamson, 2 up; A. R. Phillips defeated Bill Wilburn, 5-3; Harry Cohen and M. E. Love ended all square.

THIRD FLIGHT.
M. Mandle defeated E. W. McCain, 2 up; C. C. Chamberlin defeated W. A. Hammell, 2 up; A. J. Weinberg won from C. H. Beckel by default; John Smith won from A. C. Miegel by default; P. D. Johnson won from Pat O'Brien by default.

FOURTH FLIGHT.
L. M. Bowker defeated Pete Dovell, 3-2.

Iowa Star Retains Western Net Title

RIVER FOREST, Ill., June 21.—(AP)—Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, Iowa, today retained his western tennis championship, defeating Marcel Rainville, of Montreal, Canadian Davis cup player, 3-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-3, in finals of the western tennis championship tournament.

Catherine Wolf, Indianapolis, kept her western crown by defeating Miss Mae Cuervorst, Wichita, Kas., 1-6, 6-0, 6-3, in the women's finals.

Schneider Captures Chicago Track Race

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP)—Louis Schneider, of Indianapolis, winner of the 500-mile Indianapolis speedway automobile race Memorial Day, added more points in his quest for the national championship today by winning the Roby speedway 100-mile test. Joe Cummins, of Indianapolis, was second, with Sam Ross, Ann Arbor, Mich., third, and Lou Meyer, Los Angeles, fourth. They were the only finishers out of a starting field of twelve.

HITCHCOCKS LOSE.

PORT WASHINGTON, N. Y., June 21.—(AP)—W. Averill Harriman's Reds defeated Tommy Hitchcock's Whites in a high goal polo match here today, 11-7. Earle A. S. Hopping, young internationalist, was the outstanding player on the field, scoring five goals.

McGill Listens To Amazed Comments at Strib's Punch in Night Drill After Having Watched Champion Bring Blood With Short Punches in Afternoon.

Editor's Note: Ralph McGill, who is keeping readers of The Constitution sports pages in touch with events as W. L. Stribling and Max Schmeling prepare for their battle for the world's heavyweight boxing title, watched the champion in a workout Sunday afternoon and then raced back to Stribling's camp to watch the challenger take a drill under the lights. His stories follow.

By Ralph McGill.
Staff Correspondent.

STRIBLING'S TRAINING CAMP, GEAUGA LAKE, Ohio, June 21.—They had been battling about one minute when K. O. Kitts, Akron heavyweight, dropped flat to the canvas, his eyes rolled back and his breath gone.

What had happened to K. O. Kitts? Why he had been hit in the stummick with a pillow. Who wore the pillow? Why W. L. Stribling, the Georgian, challenger for the world's heavyweight ring title. It wasn't really a pillow, of course. It was a 16-ounce glove. Which is about the same.

Who was at the ringside? Paul Gallico, of the New York Mirror; Jackie Farrell, of the United Press; Bob Edgren, of California; Jack Kofoed, of the New York Evening Post, and a lot of other boys.

OOH! THIS BOY!

What did they say? Why they were amazed.

"I never saw a sparring partner knocked out with a left hook to the body before," said Paul Gallico. "Gosh, Pa, he looked good."

And Jack Farrell said the same thing. "He looked fast, smart and good," said Jack Farrell.

It takes quite a lick to knock out a man with a 16-ounce glove. Out at Max Schmeling's camp this afternoon I watched the champion working with 10-ounce mits. And none of them landed as did this blow of Stribling's tonight.

It was the same blow that sent tan Sam Ward reeling into the ropes where he covered up in a shell to go into a clinch. He was almost out.

Saturday night it was the left jab and the straight left to the face. Tonight it was the left hook to the old lobby. And how it landed.

ALL THERE.

That right landed now and then. And he was fast. But the left hook to the body was the thing to write home about.

Pa was satisfied. Pa was smiling like a dental ad. "Last night he was slow. Tonight he isn't," said Pa. "I thought the boy looked pretty good."

One-Eye Connelly was at the ringside. Put no faith at all in his speculations. They are colored by cups of Java or whatever One-Eye wants. He will say anything.

Strib took them on fast tonight. Kitts was first. And that left to the old mezzanine did for him, greatly to the astonishment of the boys at the ringside.

Paul Spangler, an Akron lightheavy, was next. And you should have seen Paul when he finished the round. Was his face red? Plenty, and all his own blood.

SAM PUNISHED.

Tan Sam Ward, probably the best of the spar mates, was next. He went two rounds. And W. L. punished him with that left hook and a right cross.

By dint of riding with a gent who drove at about 90 miles an hour, your correspondent made both camps today, seeing the champion in the afternoon and the challenger tonight.

Schmeling, using much lighter gloves, did not seem to be hitting as hard as Stribling did tonight with gloves six ounces heavier.

Frankie Cawley, Tommy Loughran's spar mate, arrived too late for the workout. He will appear Tuesday evening, the date of the next workout.

The boy looks good. He'll be ready July 3.

MAX SCHMELING'S TRAINING CAMP, CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Pa., June 21.—All of a sudden blood began to appear on the face of Max Schmeling's sparring partners.

Robert Edgren, internationally known boxing writer, who has peered at the best of them, took on a surprised expression.

"My goodness," he said, "the boy has improved. Last year he wasn't hitting with those short rights and lefts. He has shortened up his blows a lot, especially that right. I don't think I've ever seen a better clipping right than that."

MEANS SOMETHING.

All of which means something. Bob Edgren, who writes for The Constitution, has been staring at fights for years and years and years. He sparred with Jim Jeffries when that worthy was champion and he has followed them closely since then.

Your correspondent still thinks Stribling will win. Max Schmeling is too easy to hit with a left. A left hand will reduce Max to a rare hamburger steak in a very short time indeed.

Max can be hit. I mentioned this to Yusseff Jacobs, manager of the champion.

"Have you ever noticed," he said, "that Max is clipping these boys on the jaw nine times before they hit him once with that left?"

There is something in that. In fact there is plenty. From the start your envoy has insisted that Max Schmeling has murder in either hand. And I mean murder. Nothing polite.

TOO OPEN.

But he is too open. Unless he is deceiving the good people of the grand old U. S. A., he is going to be hit so much that he will go down, like McGinty, to the bottom of the sea.

Joe Jacobs said that Max was just letting those lefts come in there so he would get used to blocking them. The only trouble with that is that Max didn't block them.

Don't get the idea that this Schmeling is a set-up for the Georgian. Don't rush out and put down the old coin thinking the Dutchman is a sucker for Stribling's left.

He can be hit, but he can hit himself. And any young man who has those straight rights and lefts is dangerous.

SIX ROUNDS.

Max boxed six rounds this afternoon. He met George Panka, of Pittsburgh, for two rounds and George was all bloody at the finish.

Steve Simon, of Erie, was next. He is a newcomer on the card. Simon managed to land some lefts as did Panka. But Simon was all bloody at the finish.

Tony Marullo, who seems to me to be punch drunk, was next. And Tony was all bloody at the finish.

Those clipping rights were so fast that few saw them. Schmeling is using smaller gloves than Stribling. That means something. But no one can deny that he can hit. Any time the boys come out all cut up someone is pasting them hard.

The workout was completed in time to allow your correspondent to get in a car and drive back to Stribling's camp in time for the night workout.

Thomasville Fan Leaves for Fight.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 21.—Oscar Grover really intends to be on time for the Schmeling-Stribling fight for the world's heavyweight boxing title in Cleveland on July 3.

Grover left here Saturday, driving. He plans to travel slowly and spend some time with friends en route. But he will keep pushing toward the fight scene all the time.

Gotham and Coast Hold Ring Spotlight

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—The lightest boxing schedule in recent weeks finds most of the promised action centered in the New York district and out on the Pacific coast.

Justo Suarez, Argentine lightweight contender, will meet Billy Petrolle, the "Fargo Express," in a 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden Thursday night.

This match will mark the opening of Suarez's second North American campaign. The Argentine, one of the most durable of the lightweights, whipped Joe Glick, Herman Perlick, Bruce Flowers, Ray Miller and Louis (Kid) Kaplan on his first trip here last year and looms as one of the most dangerous challengers for Tony Canzoneri's world crown. Petrolle, in his last two starts, broke even with Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver welterweight. He looms as the most dangerous opponent Suarez has met.

Canzoneri himself will see some action against Herman Perlick, of the Kalamazoo Perlicks, at New Haven, Conn., Thursday night, in a 10-round non-title bout.

Fidel Labarba, Los Angeles featherweight, will battle Claude Varner, Bakersfield, Cal., at Hollywood Friday in his first start since his disappointing showing against Battalino in New York.

Murray Welcomed; Seeks Help for Vols

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 21.—(AP) John D. Martin, president of the Southern association, tonight extended an official welcome to Fay Murray, new owner of the Nashville Vols, to the fold of league club owners. Murray acquired the Nashville franchise from R. G. Allen last week.

"The information that Fay Murray and his associates have acquired the Nashville franchise is pleasing to me," Martin said, in a statement. "The president and directors, of course, regret the loss of Bob Allen, who has been their associate for many years, but, inasmuch as he desires to leave the league, we thank him for transferring his control of the Nashville club into the strong hands of Mr. Murray."

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 21.—(AP)—With the ink hardly dry on papers whereby he acquired the Nashville Southern association baseball club, Fay L. Murray is already dickering for new players and today he said five or six Class A men would join the club before the end of this week.

Jacobs Confident Maxie Will Win

SCHMELING'S TRAINING CAMP, CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., June 21.—"I have no doubt that Schmeling will retain the title," said Joe Jacobs, manager of the champion, after the workout today. "He can take it better than Stribling. Don't worry about Strib's left. Max can take it, and Strib will miss more in the fight than he is in these workouts. Max is in the best condition any champion ever was in. And he will win."

There you have the words of Joe the manager.

There is no doubt about it, the champion does look good.

Grant, Hudson and Oakes Open Quest of College Honors Today

BRYAN FAVORED FOR NET CROWN IN COLLEGIATES

'Bitsy' Seeded Number 1; Tourney Opens Today at Haverford.

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 21.—(AP) Eighty-five players, representing 36 colleges from coast to coast, are entered in the 46th annual intercollegiate lawn tennis championship tournament which begins tomorrow at the Merion Cricket Club here. Last year the entries numbered 103.

Clifford Sutter, of Tulane, who won the singles championship last year, will not defend the title as he is out of college.

The doubles champions, Dolf Muelheisen and Robert Muench, of the University of California (Berkeley), are not entered in the 1931 tournament.

Bryan Grant, Jr., of the University of North Carolina, is seeded No. 1. The other seeded players in their order are Edward Jacobs, of the University of Pittsburgh; Keith Gledhill, Stanford; Wilbur F. Coen Jr., Kansas; Bruce Barnes, Texas; David Jones, Columbia; Teddy Burwell, University of the South; Wilmer Hines, University of North Carolina; Donald Strachan, Princeton, and R. W. Ryan, Yale.

Homer Gives Feds Win Over Kirkwood

Patterson's home run in the seventh inning gave the Commodore Feds a 1-to-0 victory over Kirkwood Sunday afternoon at the prison diamond. It was a pitchers' duel between Faulkner, of the Feds, and Ayers, of Kirkwood.

John Hancock Series

$100 every month

from age 65 on as long as he lives—

the real story of a real transaction

A man 52 years old is guaranteeing himself a life income by making moderate monthly payments toward a Life Annuity.

After 65 these accumulated deposits will provide him an income of $100 every month as long as he lives.

The Annuity has solved his life income problem. It can solve yours. The amount of your deposits can be arranged to comply with your circumstances and your ideas for future income—which may be $50 a month or up to as much as you can arrange for. And the younger you are, the smaller your annual deposits up to the year of retirement.

Our booklet, "You can have an income as long as you live," explains the Annuity. Let us send you a copy.

TIGERS, GIANTS SHARE HONORS IN BIG LEAGUES

Washington Continues Hot Pace To Push Detroit in American.

By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The Detroit Tigers, who acted as the football of the American league during their tour of the east, come to life again last week as the jaunt closed and they returned home. The Tigers, last in the weekly records for some time, won four straight games to top the majors for the seven-day period ending Saturday.

Detroit, however, yielded most of the weekly honors to the flying Washington Senators. Washington's string of victories finally was broken, but the Senators won six out of seven games for second place and led both big leagues at bat with 90 hits and 59 runs, outdistancing by far all rivals in their own circuit.

In the National league, the New York Giants came in first for the week, gaining a little ground on the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals, who were second.

Lookouts Lead Southern Clubs.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 21.—(AP)—The fast-stepping Chattanooga Lookouts showed the way to the seven other Southern Association pennant hopefuls last week, with a record of four games won of six played.

Atlanta scored the most runs—49—and rated about a tie with Little Rock in hitting. Atlanta got 68 hits in six games and Little Rock 75 in seven.

Babe Ruth Regains Big Time Bat Lead

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Babe Ruth regained the batting lead of the major leagues yesterday, climbing ahead of Harvey Hendrick as he got his 13th home run and two other hits in six times at bat. His average went up four points to .391. Hendrick lost eight points as he failed to get a hit and dropped to third place in the big six at .380, although he held the top of the National league.

Charley Grimm, of Chicago, hit safely five times in succession and replaced his teammate, Riggs Stephenson, on the last rung of the big six ladder. The standing:

DUSEK IS MEMBER OF WRESTLING'S POPULAR CIRCLE

Fans Like Rudy, Who Meets Vacturoff Here Wednesday.

If all the fans who have asked Promoter Henry Weber to bring Rudy Dusek, the Nebraska Bearcat, back to Atlanta again, turn out for the show at Spiller park Wednesday night, the crowd will be the largest of the outdoor season to date.

Dusek, who is scheduled to take on Ivan Vacturoff, 230-pound Russian, in the semi-windup to the Lehman-Poggi match, is one of the most popuplar figures in the mat game today, and justly so. His experience, his spectacular style of wrestling, and his ruggedness all combine to make him a gallery favorite as well as one of the most formidable grapplers in the country.

He has met Londos, Sauer, McMillen, Shikat—all the top-notchers—at various times, and has never failed to make plenty of trouble for them. New York sports writers were unanimous in declaring that the match between Dusek and Ray Steele, as Sauer is known in the east, was the most satisfying bout of the past metropolitan indoor season. Headlining a card at Madison Square Garden, the two men put on a brilliant exhibition of scientific wrestling for almost an hour, with no advantage to either side. Then the party got a little rough, and, although Dusek is noted for his talents along that line, Sauer finally managed to pin him. Both men were physically exhausted and the house was in an uproar when the end came.

Fans who saw the Roebuck-Vacturoff battle some weeks ago, when the Russian made a hit with his fearless and aggressive tactics, realize that, good as Dusek is, he will have to call upon everything he has to win. Vacturoff's advantage in weight and strength should offset to a large degree Dusek's superior knowledge of the game.

Nazzarino Poggi and Charley Lehman, opponents in the two-hour limit event, both have large followings here as a result of their previous appearances, and much discussion is going on as to which will win. The men appear to be very evenly matched, and the duel between them should be a sparkling one.

In accordance with the recent edict of the boxing commission, all wrestlers on the card are required to be in the city tonight.

Tickets are on sale at the Candler Building soda fountain and the Piedmont Hatters, with ladies, as is customary, privileged to witness the matches from any seat in the park on payment of $1.

JACKETS FACE STRONG FIELD IN GOLF MEET

Links Stars Gather at Olympia Fields for Tourney.

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP)—One hundred and twenty-three college golf stars, including George T. Dunlap Jr., of Princeton, titleholder, and Lawrence Moller, of Notre Dame, his foe in the finals last year, will try the traps and bunkers of Olympia fields tomorrow in the opening round of the national intercollegiate championships.

It will be the first time in the history of the event that it has been decided in the middle west. The field stacks up as unusually strong.

The qualifying rounds, at 18 holes each, will be held tomorrow and Tuesday. The team championships will be decided in the qualifying rounds, the four low men on each team to count. The team title will be defended by Princeton, which has entered five players.

The individual field will be reduced to 32 in two 18-hole rounds Wednesday, with the quarter-finals set for Thursday and the semi-finals for Friday. The championship final, at 36 holes, will be played Saturday.

Fifteen institutions are represented in the team title battle. Yale leads the list with nine entrants. Harvard, Michigan, Notre Dame and Northwestern have seven each; Penn State, Williams, Illinois, Southern California and Chicago, six, and Ohio State, Loyola (Chicago), Princeton, Dartmouth and Southern Methodist, five each.

Tulane has four entrants, and Colgate and De Paul (Chicago) have three. Georgia Tech, Texas and Georgetown are represented by two each, and Pittsburgh, Stanford, Rice Institute, Brown, Knox, Washington University of St. Louis, Minnesota, College of the City of Detroit and Purdue have single entrants.

Scott Hudson Jr., of Atlanta, and Wilkin Oakes Jr., of Chattanooga, Georgia Tech stars, are both conceded good chances in the tournament.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Grantland Rice

The Buckeye Battlefield.

Ohio has now turned into one of the main battlefields of sport. For the next two weeks the Buckeye hills and vales will ring with the clank of an iron shot to the green or the thud of a leathered fist landing on a chin. The Ryder cup matches at Scioto, Columbus, Friday and Saturday—the United States open championship at Inverness, Toledo, July 2, 3 and 4. The Schmeling-Stribling heavyweight affair at Cleveland on the night of July 3.

That should be enough sport for one state to digest in a fortnight. As the late Mr. Goldsmith almost wrote:

"Ill fares the land, O hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay;
Princes and lords may flourish or may fade,
A breath can make them as a breath has made;
But a fine golf shot or a lightning thrust
When once destroyed, then all life is a bust."

That's Ohio's idea, anyway, and it sounds reasonable enough. Columbus, Toledo and Cleveland entertain in turn and those a bit soggy with the depression blues can stand up and sing—"Where Do We Go From Here, Boys, Where Do We Go From Here?"

Some of us are wondering how we are going to cover a golf battle at Toledo on July 3 and the Stribling-Schmeling fight at Cleveland that same night, but this, after all, is a minor detail. It would not be surprising to read a few such lines the next day:

"Tommy Armour landed a left hook flush to a bunker but feinted twice and countered with a slice that caught the green. Stribling was short on his approach jab and then overran the chin on his next attempt. He finally laid a full shot stone dead in the pit of Schmeling's stomach."

The Schmeling-Stribling battle at Cleveland for the heavyweight championship has already turned into the closest guessing contest of many years. Which is to say that most of the boys are somewhat baffled when it comes to calling the turn.

Most of them are willing to pick Stribling—"if"—the "if" being if the Georgian will only shoot his stuff without regard to consequences. They figure he has the weapons to win with, if he will only use them without reservations. They know Schmeling will call on everything he has in stock, but he hasn't as much to call on in the way of speed, boxing skill, experience and ring craft.

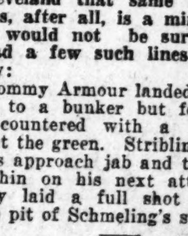

The German is just about as strong, he is a harder hitter with the right from close range and he has always been much more aggressive. If he wins it will be because he could use fewer weapons with better effect.

No one has to worry about the physical condition of either, although Schmeling would be better off with more road work and more skipping. He needs speed more than Stribling does, for the latter is fast enough.

If there is any mistake in either camp it will be through over-confidence. Neither is nearly that good.

SALE OF W. & A. PROPOSED IN BILL

The bill gives the commission authority to employ a secretary and "such experts as it may deem necessary to enable it to carry out the duties imposed on it." The commission is authorized to fix compensation for the work of the secretary and experts.

The commissioners would be required to make a thorough inspection of the properties, including the road bed between Atlanta and Chattanooga and the terminals here and in the Tennessee city. For the expenses of the commission $15,000 would be set aside.

Authorization is given the commission to sell the railroad either for cash or part cash and the remainder over a period of years with the commission fixing the amount of annual payments and interest. It would authorize the sale of the properties in whole or in part, giving due consideration to the present long lease.

Money to Apply on Debt.

The commission would be authorized and empowered to negotiate the sale and "may in its discretion either invite competitive bidding or conduct direct negotiations with prospective bidders or both." In the event the commissioners agree upon terms and details of a formal sales contract, the contract is to be prepared and certified to the governor and executed by the chief executive in behalf of the state.

The bill provides that in event of the sale the money derived is to be applied first to the payment of bonded indebtedness; second, to pay the present outstanding indebtedness, and third, the balance to be paid into the treasury to be appropriated to the common schools and state educational institutions.

The commission would make a full report "of its acts and doings by the fourth Wednesday in June, 1933, to the general assembly or an earlier date provided another session of the general assembly meets prior to said date named."

In commenting on his bill, Mr. Dorsett said:

"The commission named in the bill is composed of outstanding Georgians and they can be entrusted to handle the sale of the properties for the best interest of the state.

"I have given the matter careful consideration and have come to the conclusion that it will be for the best interest of the people of Georgia, that the state had better as an economical proposition sell the road outright, rather than be continually selling the rentals thereof at a tremendous loss to the taxpayers of the state in discount interests in order to raise revenues to meet part of the indebtedness of the state.

"If a satisfactory sale of the railroad and all of its terminal properties can be made, it will solve the state's financial problems and furnish the ready cash to put the state on an actual cash paying basis.

"On account of paved roads, automobiles, busses and trucks, and when we consider the policy of consolidating the independent railroad lines by the government into a few large systems of transportation, then it might be well for the state to get out of the railroad business."

More than half of the membership of the house at the regular session have seen previous legislative service. In the senate there will be new members, with the exception of W. Cecil Neill and Emmett Williams. Eighteen members of the 1929 house will sit in this year's senate. Five members of the 1929 senate are to serve in the house.

WOULD REFUSE TO SERVE, CLARK HOWELL DECLARES

Clark Howell, Sr., one of the Fulton county men proposed as a member of the Western & Atlantic disposal board, when informed of Representative Dorsett's intention Sunday night, said:

"I do not believe the proposal to sell the railroad is for the best interests of the state, and will decline to serve on the board if the bill is passed by the legislature and signed by the governor. However, I do not believe it will ever obtain the approval of the legislature."

Declining to comment on the Dorsett proposal to sell the Western & Atlantic railroad, Representative Marion Allen, of Baldwin county, one of the authors of the special session bill to discount warrants for ten years, said Sunday night that "a similar bill" will be introduced early in the regular session."

Allen, after a conference with Representative Willis Battle, of Muscogee, said that the discount bill, with certain minor changes, would be reintroduced, and that he felt assured it would pass. As introduced in the special session, it would yield the treasury approximately $3,200,000.

MR. AND MRS. HARRIS WIN TRUST AWARDS

of the Enquirer-Sun in 1923, in addition to president of the newspaper company. He served as first lieutenant in 1917 and captain in 1918 of the military intelligence division of the United States army. Mr. Harris is a member of the advisory board of the School of Journalism, Columbia. He was awarded the Pulitzer prize ($500 gold medal) for the "most disinterested and meritorious public service" rendered by an American newspaper in 1925 for a fight against the K. K. K., against the law barring teaching of evolution, and for justice for the negro. He was on the nation's roll of honor, 1927.

Mrs. Harris was born in Atlanta November 11, 1875, the daughter of Charles Augustus and Susie (Rawson) Collier. She graduated from Washington Seminary, Atlanta, and was a student at Miss Chamberlayne's school, Boston, for three years, and Cowles Art school for two years. She took a course in sociology at the University of Chicago.

Wrote Series From Paris.

Mrs. Harris wrote a series of articles for the New York Herald Syndicate in 1914 and also a series from Paris for the same syndicate in 1919-20. She has contributed articles on art and travel to the New York Morning Telegraph and the American Magazine of Art. She is the author of "The Foundling Prince," 1917, and the "Life and Letters of Joel Chandler Harris," 1919. Her articles have appeared in The Constitution.

The Oberlaender Trust was founded "for the support of American citizens who are actively engaged in work that concerns the public welfare, such as editors and writers, public health workers, professors and students who are engaged in research work that is of special interest to the American people, with the purpose of promoting good will between the United States and all German-speaking countries."

Gustav Oberlaender, the founder, came to New York from Germany in 1888 at the age of 20. He went to work in a Dey street bookstore at a salary of $7 a week, and on April 5, 1931, the immigrant boy, now the retired former president of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, gave an endowment of $1,000,000 for the Oberlaender Trust. The money will be distributed over a period of 25 years "among mature persons" who would like to study in Germany, are interested in international affairs and are qualified to interpret their findings to the American people. The gift was the result of many years of thought on the relations between the people of the country in which he was born and that of his adoption.

Mr. Oberlaender has been quoted as saying: "I do not know what the endowment will actually do, but I have hopes that it may do much." He is the head of the board of trustees, and during his life will dictate the investment of the principal. The board includes Carl W. Ackerman, director of the Pulitzer School of Journalism of Columbia University; Dr. Haven Emerson, also of Columbia; Henry Allen Moe, secretary of the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, and Wilbur K. Thomas, of Philadelphia, director of the Carl Schurz Foundation. Distribution of the fund and the selection of those who will receive its benefits will be left entirely to the trustees, and all of the principal will ultimately be spent.

Eligible for the awards are only those men and women working in constructive social fields. Selections are made from those doing public health or welfare work, editors, writers, research students and those interested in and studying race relationships, social conditions and old-age insurance. Men and women interested in music and art will also be qualified for selection.

The New York Times in commenting on the trust editorially, compares the million dollar expenditure as a wise application of the "ounce of prevention" proverb, pointing out that the endowment, although small compared to the millions that nations spend for armaments (cures) will be effectual. The Times expressed the opinion that "it will serve a useful purpose now in helping to repair international relations."

Hanson Noted Composer.

Dr. Hamilton was given an award for special research in industrial sickness insurance. She was bacteriologist of the Memorial Institute for Infectious Diseases from 1902 to 1910, and medical investigator of the Illinois Commission Occupational Diseases in 1910. She investigated industrial poisons for the department of labor from 1910 to 1921, and was made assistant professor of industrial medicine at Harvard in 1919. She is a member of the health organization of the League of Nations.

Dr. Hanson is a composer and conductor interested in discovering promising works of young German composers for production in America, and in conducting German orchestras in the presentation of American compositions to German audiences. He has served as guest conductor of the Rome Symphony orchestra, Cleveland, New York, St. Louis, Kansas City, San Francisco, Chicago and Baltimore Symphony orchestras, and the Rochester, Los Angeles and New York Philharmonic orchestras.

Dr. Millikan is a recipent of the Nobel Prize in Physics. He is widely known for his measurement of the speed of light. He won the Nobel Prize for isolating and measuring the ultimate electric unit, the electron and for photo-electric researches. He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a member of the National Academy of Sciences (foreign section), the American Philosophical Society, the American Physical Society, of which he was president in 1916-1918, the Royal Institute of Great Britain, the Academy of Science of Leyden, Holland, and other societies. He was the American member of the commission on Intellectual Co-operation of the League of Nations.

Mr. Nolen is to study the development of city planning in Germany, particularly the beautifying of river banks and waterfronts. Among his more important works is a park system for Chattanooga, Tenn., and general plans for Smith College (Northampton, Mass.) He is a past president of the National Conference on City Planning and of the American City Planning Institute, and is a member of the executive committee of the International Federation for Housing and Town Planning.

Dr. Williams, now president of the University of Missouri, was made dean of the university's school of journalism in 1908. He was president of the Missouri Press Association in 1887 and president of the National Editorial Association in 1895. He organized and was secretary of the World Press Parliament, St. Louis, 1904, was a director of the International Press Congress, San Francisco, 1915, and president of the first Pan-American Congress of Journalists, Washington, 1926.

miss, chimed in and declared to goodness that he wasn't doing a mile more than 55. They were not injured, though showered with sparks.

ly defeated the communists, inflicting heavy losses.

President Chiang was en route to Nanchang, Kiangsi, today to take personal command of his troops in the campaign against the communists. Chiang boarded a gunboat at Nanking yesterday for the journey to Nanchang.

Meanwhile developments in the breach between the nationalist government and the newly established Canton government were comparatively few. War materials for the Cantonese were being halted at Hongkong, British outpost, since Great Britain does not recognize the southern government.

Both Canton and Nanking were exerting every effort to win the support of General Chen Ming-Shu. Although southern insurgent leaders officially consider him neutral, there seems little doubt that he soon will attack his former capital, Canton.

Reliable dispatches said Chen, who has been identified variously with the nationalist government and the southern insurrection, is receiving no more funds from the Canton government. Reports stated also that the southerners seized 2,000 rifles and many machine guns discovered at Chen's Canton headquarters.

Chen, when he was ousted from his Canton post, fled to Japan. He returned after a brief exile, joining his army in Kiangsi province. Subsequently he was represented as having sworn allegiance to President Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist government. Then he was quoted as having announced his intentions of supporting the southern rebellion.

GEORGIANS READY TO WELCOME KEY

geles, and his wife refused to drink intoxicating wines, saying they intended to obey the constitution of the United States even when they were away from home. During the entire month they responded to toasts by raising glasses of ice water or ginger ale.

Mayor Metcalfe, of Omaha, Neb., on the day the party landed on French soil, drank a champagne toast and then, turning to reporters and photographers, declared:

"I detest champagne, but Mrs. Metcalfe and I drank this toast because we felt it in our hearts."

There seemed little likelihood that these statements would be amplified tomorrow, for Friday those who had made the tour held a meeting on the liner and agreed that upon their arrival they would give out one general statement to the press, in order to avoid "embarrassing interviews."

There were 27 mayors and representatives of mayors in the party that toured France as guests of the French government, but four are not returning now.

They are Mayor George L. Baker, of Portland, Ore., who is remaining abroad to attend the Rotary International convention in Vienna; Henri Prince, proxy for Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, who will inspect French hotels; Mayor George W. Coan Jr., of Winston-Salem, N. C., who is on another sightseeing trip, and Sylvester Andriano, representing the mayor of San Francisco, who is going to Italy to visit his mother.

BIBLE CLASS STANDS BEHIND MAYOR-TEACHER

Mayor James L. Key, Atlanta's own good-will ambassador, will be welcomed to Atlanta as "a great statesman, a Christian gentleman and as a much-missed and beloved teacher" of the James L. Key Bible class of the Grace Methodist church.

This became known Sunday when every member of the large class stood and pledged to join thousands of other Atlantans in extending to him the city's most cordial and tumultuous welcome.

And as final details of the Key reception and parade, in which at least 75,000 Atlantans are slated to participate, were being perfected Sunday night, news came from New York that if Atlanta is to pay the returning mayor a greater tribute than is planned there, it will be forced to exert itself.

Key will taste the first reaction of his homeland to the charges he made in France that the American dry system is a failure when the Ile de France docks about noon today in the metropolis and writes finis to the historic tour of the American mayors.

He will find that his statements "were not received adversely by a great majority of clear-thinking and fair Americans who have studied the situation," his friends claim, and New York Sunday night prepared to acclaim him "as a bold man who would speak his convictions under all circumstances.

When Key issued his bald statements from a Paris sick bed several weeks ago he was just a member of a party of visiting American mayors, but they struck such a popular chord throughout the nation that he is regarded today as a national figure, and is being mentioned prominently as the running mate for the democratic party's presidential hope of 1932.

W. M. Pharr, former president of the Key Bible class, Sunday morning paraded to the front of the Grace church auditorium and praised Key. He was followed by a short laudatory speech by Ben L. Brooks, president of the class, and then the entire assemblage stood on its feet to a man and agreed to meet Key at the station when he returns "to show him how much we appreciate what he has done for this church and for us."

"There are few people in the world who know Mr. Key as we do," Pharr said. "We know him to be a clear thinker, a great statesman and a fine Christian gentleman. I believe it is incumbent on us to show that high regard in which we hold him when he arrives in Atlanta by joining in the parade and the general acclaim."

Brooks followed the same general line in presenting the matter, and the class stood 100 per cent behind Key.

No mention was made of the famous anti-prohibition utterances, and that is a delicate matter to discuss in the church. Many think the attack, while true, was ill advised; others think it was not true at all and will even say that the prohibition law is being enforced; still others are adamant in their prohibition views.

The matter is so delicate that high officials still remain silent about it, and there is a feeling that anything is likely to happen at any moment. One word in the wrong place might cause the congregation to split wide open. Key's friends are loyal and would remain so. There is an element, however, which feels that the Atlanta executive should be disciplined by the church for "ill advised utterances while visiting in a foreign country."

Rev. Robert Z. Tyler, pastor of Grace Methodist church, will meet Key when he arrives, but the meeting "will be as an old friend and as the pastor of the church and not as a censorship or a condoning move," it was explained by close friends.

David Robinson, president of the New York Downtown League, acting for Miller M. Brister, president of the Georgia Society of New York, laid as definite plans as possible for receiving and entertaining the mayor. He said a luncheon or dinner will be tendered Key and his daughter, Ruth, if they can remain in New York that long, by members of the society.

To Have Special Guard.

Along with the group to greet Key will be a corps of secret operatives of the New York police department, placed there on orders of Mayor James J. Walker to prevent any act of threatened violence against the mayor. Several threats have been made here.

Many nationally known figures are slated to be at the dock when Key arrives to tender their greetings. Among them are Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, former Governor Alfred E. Smith, possibly Bobby Jones, emperor of golf, and an Atlanta delegation composed of Walter H. Rich, Samuel C. Dobbs, Dr. W. A. Arnold, Dr. Frank Eskridge, J. P. Womack and others.

If plans of the local reception committee, headed by George W. Hanson and other close personal friends of the mayor materialize, Key and Miss Ruth will arrive at the Terminal station at 5:40 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

More than 10,000 are expected to actually participate in the parade, while many thousand others will line the streets and sidewalks leading from the station to the city hall. The route will be out Spring street to Marietta, Marietta and Decatur to Pryor, Pryor to Mitchell and thence to the city hall.

As the train bearing Key steams into Atlanta every whistle available will screech, horns will toot, half a dozen bands will play and added to that din will be the clang of cow bells and the thunderous welcome "hello" from a score of thousand eager throats.

Key's Sunday school class will have a prominent place in the parade, following press cars, which will be directly behind the mayor's car and his police escort.

More than 100 leading Atlanta businessmen, civic leaders, church workers and close personal friends form a gigantic reception body, and Atlanta plans to roar the greatest welcome to Key ever extended to any returning mayor.

Former Mayors I. N. Ragsdale and Walter A. Sims will be there and will have prominent places in the exercises, according to plans.

George Moore, president of the Atlanta Greek Society, and a special committee from that body, will be among the welcomers.

DR. NEWTON TO GREET KEY AS "GOOD FRIEND"

Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, Sunday said he would serve on Mayor Key's welcome committee as a good friend of the chief executive, adding that he did not share Mr. Key's view on prohibition.

Dr. Newton said:

"Having been named on the committee to welcome my good friend, Mayor James L. Key, upon his return from France, I have been asked if I share his published views regarding prohibition.

"I do not.

"I have talked a number of times with Mr. Key about this vital question and he understands my position. The great majority of people are agreed, I am fully convinced, that whisky is an evil and I would rather risk the control of this monstrous vice as an outlawed traffic than any plan thus far advanced."

Mrs. Arthur Tufts Invited To Join Washington Cathedral Committee

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—Acceptance by Mrs. Arthur Tufts, of Atlanta, Ga., of an invitation to serve as Georgia vice chairman of the national women's committee for Washington cathedral is announced by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington.

The national women's committee for Washington cathedral is composed of women of prominence from many parts of the land. Its general purpose is to arouse nationwide interest in the work of completing the north and south transepts of the cathedral for use during the George Washington bicentennial observance in 1932. Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the president, is honorary chairman, and Mrs. William Adams Brown, president of the Colonial Dames of the state of New York, is national chairman.

Mrs. Robert C. Alston, of Atlanta, is chairman for the south. Among other women interested are Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Albert Sidney Burleson, of Austin, Texas; Mrs. E. H. Harriman, of New York; Mrs. Norman B. Livermore, of Ross, Cal.; Mrs. George Wharton Pepper, of Philadelphia; Mrs. William Cooper Procter, of Cincinnati; Mrs. John D. Sherman, of Denver, Col.; Mrs. Charles L. Slattery, of Boston, Mass.; Mrs. George C. Christian, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. Marvin Bristol Rosenberry, of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Francis C. Wilson, of Santa Fe, N. M.

The specific objective is the enlistment of donors of small, annual amounts for the building and maintenance of the great edifice. Gifts received during the first year of the committee's effort will be used with similar gifts from other states for the erection of the porch of the north transept. This is to be marked, when completed, as the gift of American womanhood. The first stone of this unit was placed recently by Mrs. Hoover at an impressive ceremony.

Of fourteenth century gothic design, Washington cathedral will rank in size when completed with the great church structures of the world. It will be cruciform in shape with an imposing central tower and two lofty west towers. The total length measuring from the exterior of the apse to the west front will be 534 feet and the width at the transepts will be 215 feet. The total area will be 71,000 square feet, affording standing room at great services for 27,000 persons.

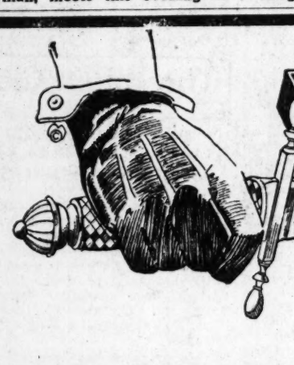

The idea of a "church for national purposes" at the seat of the federal government is attributed to George Washington, but actual construction did not start until 1907 when President Roosevelt assisted at the laying of the foundation stone. At present the edifice is about one-fourth built, the structurally completed portions including the massive foundations, the nave crypt, three crypt chapels, the apse and the choir. Present construction deals with the north and south transepts. The desire to complete them by 1932 is based on the fact that they could be used with the sanctuary and choir as the scene of services commemorating the first president.

Benefit Bridge.

The woman's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will give a benefit bridge party at the Ansley roof garden Friday evening, June 26. There will be numerous prizes and refreshments. All friends of the division are invited to attend, particularly the senior and junior members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The tables are $2 and reservations may be made by calling the secretary at Walnut 0845.

Miss Sarah Bailey Weds Mr. Pierce

NEWNAN, Ga., June 21.—The marriage of Miss Sarah Hunnicutt Bailey to Comer Crittenton Pierce was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Bailey, near Newnan. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, of Atlanta, in the presence of the immediate families.

In the living room an altar was formed of pink hydrangea and ferns, interspersed with seven-branched cathedral candelabra. Throughout the house were floor baskets of pink gladioluses.

Mrs. H. W. Price, aunt of the bride, sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told." During the ceremony "To a Wild Rose" was played, the music being rendered by Miss Harlowe Thompson, of Comer, Ga.

There were no attendants. The bride wore a wedding gown of navy blue chiffon fashioned in long, graceful lines and trimmed in soft folds of white, with hat and accessories to match. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Pierce is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Bailey. She is a graduate of the Georgia State Teachers' College at Athens. For the past three years she has taught in the Columbus public schools.

Mr. Pierce is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Pierce, of Louisville, Ala. He received his degree from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn and is a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. He is connected with the Brooks-Fisher Co., of Atlanta.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs. Pierce left by motor for a wedding trip. Upon their return they will be at home at 1539 Morningside drive, Atlanta.

VITAL INDIAN POINT BELIEVED SETTLED

SIMLA, India, June 21.—(AP)—As a result of prolonged conferences between leaders of the All-India Moslem party and the national Moslem party, the vexatious communal problem, which almost wrecked the last London round table conference, today seemed on the point of settlement.

If this issue finally is solved to the satisfaction of both groups, it will remove the last obstacle to Mahatma Gandhi's participation in the forthcoming second round table conference in London.

Of 14 points proposed by the Moslem communalists, 13 have been accepted by the Moslem nationalists, who support the leadership of Gandhi.

The difficult plank involves joint electorates against separate electorates, the Moslem communalists championing the latter and the Moslem nationalists the former.

This program probably will be solved by limiting the life of separate electorates for Moslem communities for a period of five or three years, after which a system of joint electorates for all might be evolved.

BOSTON PROBES LOTTERY SWINDLE

BOSTON, June 21.—(AP)—Boston police announced tonight they were seeking the promoters of a lottery swindle which they said was assuming large proportions. Thousands of tickets already had been sold in New England territory.

Deputy Superintendent of Police James McDevitt said that a man, posing as an agent of the Irish Free State government, had flooded eastern states with tickets on a lottery based on the races at New Market, England, next October. Inquiries from Free State officials disclosed that the lottery was fraudulent, McDevitt said.

HATHAWAY TRIAL REOPENS TODAY

NEWPORT, R. I., June 21.—(AP)—The third week of the trial of Elliott R. Hathaway for the murder of Verna Russell, 20-year-old student nurse, will open tomorrow with the Massachusetts legislator's son scheduled to take the witness stand.

He faces a life in prison if convicted. The state claims he strangled the nurse. The defense, as outlined by Hathaway's chief of counsel, George Hurley, claims a fragment of artificial dental work lodged in her throat and caused death.

WOMAN FACES TRIAL TODAY IN SLAYING

GAINESVILLE, Fla., June 21.—(AP)—Selection of a jury to try Mrs. Nellie Pierce, 40, charged with the murder of her husband, James F. Pierce, 41, here on May 21, is expected to occupy circuit court when it convenes tomorrow. Judge A. V. Long will preside.

Mrs. Pierce contends the homicide was an accident. She told of accidentally discharging a shotgun she was attempting to hide from her husband after he had threatened to kill her 14-year-old son by a former marriage.

FARMER FACES TRIAL IN FLORIDA KILLING

CLEARWATER, Fla., June 21.—(AP)—Ralph N. Black, 21, farmer, will go on trial in circuit court tomorrow on first degree murder charges which resulted from the shooting on June 6 of Frank Albury, fishing camp proprietor. The slaying followed an argument over the right of way of a narrow sand road near here. Black claimed self-defense.

TALKING IT OVER

BY CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

This is the first chapter of the autobiography of a modern youth. It is paraphrased and a bit condensed but the facts are as he has written them. The son of an educated father and mother, he refused to go to college and his parents accepted his refusal in good part. He secured a position as a textile chemist with a large manufacturing company in a small town. He made his home with a prominent family and moved in their social circle until one night a friend introduced him to a pretty girl who swept him off his feet. It was a case of mutual love at first sight.

Several days later while he was about his duties in the mill he discovered, to his amazement, that the girl was working in the same building with him, though each had been in ignorance of the other's presence. The girl was ashamed of her family and frankly said so, accepting her responsibility to contribute to their support but feeling, at the same time, distinctly superior to them.

For some months the young man has been turning down invitations in the "better set" because he prefers the society of his newfound Circe. He has been going out with her and avoiding his old acquaintances. This method is repugnant to his nature and he has come to the conclusion that he must move from his present home to the home of some people of "her class" or he must give her up. His first impulse is to take her and fly to his family, but he thinks his family would "blow up" if he followed that impulse. Now he wants to know what he ought to do.

First of all, he must be very slow about taking an irrevocable step. Financial differences and so-called social differences need not necessarily constitute impassable barriers to a happy marriage. But before contracting such a marriage the young man should be very sure that his love at first sight is not a mere physical attraction. Time will convince him whether or not it is.

Most of us are impressed with the romantic phrase "love at first sight." I wonder if it is as good as the sane and solid sort of love that grows slowly, blooms sparsely, and dies hard? I know a garden where there are two kinds of lupin, the annual and the perennial. You may plant both types of seed. The annual will come up quickly, grow rapidly and be ready to bloom before the perennial sort has attained any size. Both will bloom but the second year the annual doesn't come up, for the frost has killed root, branch and flower. The perennial lupin will send up fine fat shoots the second year and they will be topped by blooms larger than the annual ever bore. On through the years they will live and flower. It is so with love.

A young man of 22, as this one is, owes it to his parents to discuss with them his plans that will affect his whole life and theirs. Because of their years and their experience they have worldly wisdom. Because of their love for their son they have ambition for his welfare and his happiness. They should have the opportunity to express themselves about such a momentous matter.

It is well to remember, too, that a woman is always an integral part of her family in the sense that a man is not. A woman is seldom separated from her family while she lives. The family tie is one of the strongest that she knows. Therefore, when a man marries a woman he may be well assured that he shall have to deal with her family and deal with them on intimate terms.

If, after facing these facts, and after long association with the girl, the man finds that he cannot be happy without her, marriage is the logical step.

Every day I receive wailing letters from young people who have got married before they have known their own minds. Nine times out of ten the trouble is ascribed to the men who repent their early bargains and either leave their young wives or remain with them and treat them outrageously. The girl who appeals to a man of 22 is not necessarily the girl who appeals to the man of 30. He is more susceptible to a pretty face when he is young, more susceptible to outward appearance of charm, which may, or may not be indicative of the substantial qualities that a woman must possess if she is to make him a good wife. Not many men of 22 are capable of making decision about these substantial qualities.

If this young man is successful in his position the chances are that his work will take him to another and a larger city and the time comes if he has discovered that his love at first sight is love that will stand the weather he can marry the girl and take her away from surroundings that embarrass them and hamper them. He can gain nothing by acting hastily. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I am afflicted with an inferiority complex as far as the fair sex are concerned. I have been in love twice with girls who approached the shadow of my ideal. After a few months we were just good friends. I sometimes dream of having a home and a wife who is more than a mere friend. I have never had a girl in love with me. That fact doesn't worry me, for I believe it will come right in time. I don't want to get married yet, but I would like to have a girl show some interest in me, that interest pulling me toward the little home. I want an old-fashioned girl with brains who is fairly good looking and one who likes what I like or one who can make me like what she likes. Should I keep on bumping myself into one disappointment after another or should I wait for the right girl to cross my path? CHARLIE.

Answer:

Dear Charlie, this letter serves a double purpose. It answers a score of questions that I should like to have answered by a young man. Scores of girls ask this question: "What do the boys like?" You have told them. They like old-fashioned girls, with brains, not necessarily beautiful but fairly good looking, girls who will cater to their taste or take the time and trouble to convert the men to their taste. They like girls who pull them toward the little home. Flappers, listen: modern girls, take note, the old-fashioned girl is coming into her own again.

The second purpose served is to be able to comfort Charlie and the other boys who are discouraged about their progress with the fair sex. One of the biggest advantages a man has over a woman is his ability to take the bumps of disappointment in love. If a woman loves a man who doesn't return it she feels disgraced. If a man loves a woman who doesn't love him he is free to try again with the same one or another. Very often he succeeds the second time with the same girl where he failed the first time.

A certain oil company that caters to the public counts the cars that pass the corners in a city before it selects the site for its service station. The more cars that pass the more purchasing people pass and to get big business a company must put itself where big business is passing. So with the men, the right girl is more likely to cross your path if you station yourself where they are passing. The bumps are inevitable in heavy traffic, but they are seldom fatal. Bent fenders are not fatal to the efficiency of a motor car and bumped boys are not rendered inefficient by the bumps they receive at the hands of the girls. Every bump is a service badge which proclaims that you have been in the fray. CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Burgess Children's Stories

A DESERTED HOME.

BY THORNTON W. BURGESS.

An empty house is lorn and drear
And holds no element of cheer.
—Old Mother West Wind.

Bad news travels fast. It always has been so and I guess it always will be so. It sometimes takes quite a while for good news to get about, but if there is anything that can travel faster than bad news I don't know what it is. So it was that in an amazingly short time the dreadful thing that had happened was known all over Prarie-dog Town even to the outskirts.

"You see," said Yap Yap to Mrs. Yap Yap, "it is just as I told you, no safer in the middle of the town than out here on the edge."

Mrs. Yap Yap took no notice of this. "Have you heard how many were caught by those dreadful Coyotes?" she inquired.

"I heard that two whole families were killed," spoke up young Mrs. Stubtail, who had run over to gossip.

"I heard the same thing," said Yap Yap, "but I doubt if it was as bad as that. You know how stories grow. I also heard that a mother and four children were caught and that is bad enough."

"Neither story is right," spoke up Stubtail, who had come up just in time to hear what was said. "There were four half-grown and rather heedless youngsters, three from one family and one from another. The latter had run into the house with the others when the first alarm was given. I've been over there and have the story straight. I was born in the house right next door to where it happened. The folks are moving out."

"What folks?" inquired Mrs. Yap Yap.

"Why the ones who lived in the house where it happened," replied Stubtail. "The three children were all they had at home, and they say they don't intend to stay there now because if they should have another family they never would feel easy."

"I would feel the same way," declared Mrs. Yap Yap. "I never would want to see the house again."

Late that afternoon curiosity led Yap Yap to visit that house. He found is deserted. The owners had moved to another part of the town, he was told. There were several other visitors, drawn there like himself by curiosity. He was shown just where Speedfoot the Coyote had lain in wait. The story of what had happened was told over and over as newcomers came.

By the next day the whole affair apparently was forgotten. Such things are quickly forgotten by little people of the out-of-doors. It is well it is so. The two who had lived in that house were already busy digging a new one on the edge of the town not far from Yap Yap's home, and the deserted house was left severely alone. There it stood in the very middle of the town and no one had anything to do with it. It was empty for some time.

Then one evening Mr. and Mrs. Billy Owl came silently sailing over the town. All the inhabitants had gone to bed and the whole town seemed deserted. But they knew it wasn't. They knew all about Prairie-dog towns, for they had been born in one some distance away. The home had been broken up there and they had decided to seek another in some other town. So here they were house hunting for, unlike any other members of the Owl family, the branch to which they belonged prefers to live in the ground. They are what are known as Burrowing Owls and have no interest whatever in trees.

Back and forth they sailed over the sleeping town and, although it was dusk, they could see perfectly. At last they came to the deserted house and alighted on it. They knew at once that it was deserted. Already the earth around the doorway had begun to crumble and fall in. Mrs. Billy Owl looked it over carefully.

"It will do for the present," said she. "We can live here until we can find something better."

"Just as you say," replied Billy Owl. "This looks like a good town. We ought to find a good living about here."

So it came about that when the town awoke the next morning it was to find that the deserted house had new tenants.

560

It's most attractive. The wrapped arrangement of the fronts are particularly slimming. At either side of the front below the patch pockets inverted plaits flare the hem. The belt is concealed at the front, contributing further lengthened line.

It's jaunty in marine blue cotton shirting fabric with white pin dots and plain white trim.

Style No. 560 can be had in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust.

The 36-inch size requires 3 1-4 yards of 39-inch material with 3-4 yard of 35-inch contrasting.

Cotton shantung, linen, dimity, handkerchief lawn, cotton mesh and ginghams smartly appropriate.

The Radio Clock

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD
(Associated Press Radio Editor)

Time is Central Standard throughout.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Brad Browne is to bring his Nit Wits back to radio tomorrow night.

With practically the same cast that he had during its long run on WABC-CBS, he plans to make the return "debut" over a similar network at 8:30 p. m. The same old theme song, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," will be used.

This program has been off the air for several months, having been discontinued to make way for sponsored features.

Another return is scheduled for tomorrow on WEAF-NBC. This one will bring back "Uncle Abe and David," but under a different name—the Stebbins Boys. The leading roles will be taken, as in the previous skits, by Phillips H. Lord and Arthur Allen.

The program is to be presented five nights a week except Saturdays and Sundays, at 4:45 for an eastern network and at 9:15 for a middle western group.

Otherwise your dials may be set for:

11:30 a. m.—Farm and Home Hour program from National 4-H Club camp, WJZ-NBC.

2:30—Musical interludes, instrumental and vocal soloists, WEAF-NBC.

2:45—Dance music from London, WJZ-NBC.

3:30—Phil Brae, baritone, and Billy Scholtz, tenor, in songs and patter, WABC-CBS.

4:00—Music Treasure Box, conducted by Pierre Key, WJZ-NBC.

5:45—Roxy Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Maurice Baron, former cowboy and now successor to Erno Rapee, WJZ-NBC.

6:30—George E. Q. Johnson, of Chicago, U. S. district attorney, talking on the activities of gangland, WABC-CBS.

7:30—Russian program in the Family Party, WEAF-NBC; reduction of music of Paris to 15 minutes, followed by the Columbians at 7:45, WABC-CBS.

8:00—Broadcast from testimonial dinner in honor of Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, until 8:45, WEAF-NBC on his 50th birth anniversary.

8:00—Guy Lombardo and His Orchestra playing from Cincinnati, WABC-CBS.

Culbertson on Contract

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

"Time and Tide On No Man Waits"

Time is one of the most important elements in the play of a hand at no-trump. The race for the establishment of winning low cards before the enemy does likewise, generally determines the success or failure of the contract. This is a very exciting contest when two long and strong suits are opposed. When the honors heading suits are in sequence, the attack is direct and the fate of the clash of force against force rests upon frontal attack.

At other times the opponents must attempt an encircling movement. This is true when the suit is not headed by a strong honor sequence and the declarer's tenaces must be developed by finesses. The hand today is a case in point and vividly portrays the importance of time factor in play. It was played in duplicate at a recent tournament in Los Angeles. The scores varied all the way from a defeat of 900 points in one instance to the making of 5-odd in another. Victory or defeat rested on the planning of the campaign and consequent play of the first card by the declarer.

North-South vulnerable
No score

North: ♠ K J 9 ♥ Q 7 ♦ 10 9 4 ♣ K Q 10 9 2
West: ♠ A 8 5 4 ♥ 3 2 ♦ K J 8 6 2 ♣ 7 6
East: ♠ Q 10 7 6 ♥ J 9 8 4 ♦ 5 3 ♣ A 8 5
South: ♠ 3 2 ♥ A K 10 6 5 ♦ A Q 7 ♣ J 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	2 ♦ (1)	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT (2)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—West's defensive overcall of two diamonds is sound. North and South appear to be on the way to a 700-point rubber. The hand contains two honor tricks, as well as fair playing strength. The bid can do no harm. It may, on the contrary, prevent opponents from bidding a makable game. If it does not serve that purpose, it may point the way to the only safe defense. It is true that game with West's hand is remote against strength shown by an opening bid; still, "guerilla tactics," when judiciously used, will make it harder for the enemy to get together.

2—South boldly carries the contract to game, encouraged by North's free takeout. His hand contains more strength than 2 1-2 honor tricks, shown by his opening bid, but the heart suit, lacking support by partner, is not strong enough to re-bid.

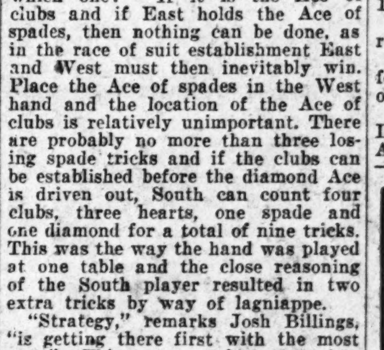

West's choice of an opening lead is fairly clearly marked. Hearts were bid by South originally. North has bid clubs. The spade suit has not been mentioned in the bidding. Perhaps that is the weak spot in South's armor, so West opens his fourth best spade in order to get a lead through the Ace Queen in diamonds, which South apparently holds. South had a hard guess. "West holds one of the missing Aces," he reasoned, "but which one?" If it is the Ace of clubs and if East holds the Ace of spades, then nothing can be done, as in the race of suit establishment East and West must then inevitably win. Place the Ace of spades in the West hand and the location of the Ace of clubs is relatively unimportant. There are probably no more than three losing spade tricks and if the clubs can be established before the diamond Ace is driven out, South can count four clubs, three hearts, one spade and one diamond for a total of nine tricks. This was the way the hand was played at one table and the close reasoning of the South player resulted in two extra tricks by way of lagniappe.

"Strategy," remarks Josh Billings, "is getting there first with the most men." This may not be a complete definition of strategy but it is a very accurate definition of the strategy underlying the play of this and other hands of like character.

Balls Land in Field, Farmer Shoots Golfers

HAMILTON, Ohio, June 21.—(AP)—H. E. Crank, farmer, was charged today with shooting two golfers whose errant golf balls landed in his corn field.

The victims, Fred C. Schultheiss, 36, and Robert Sprandel, 13, were peppered with buckshot when Schultheiss invaded the Crank corn patch to retrieve a ball. Neither of the injured pair's wounds was serious.

Crank, charged with shooting to kill, was freed on bond.

HARRY POOLE GETS NEW EQUIPMENT

The newest thing in ambulances, including hot and cold water, radio, heater and a baby basket, as well as the conventional emergency kit and medicine closet is featured by the new Meteor ambulance purchased by Harry G. Poole & Co., funeral directors, of 184 Pryor street. In addition to the completely fitted ambulance, two new hearses, one a Studebaker free-wheeling and the other a Meteor synchromesh, were obtained on a recent trip to South Bend, Ind., and Piqua, Ohio. A. D. Mayo, of the organization, made the trip, going by airplane to Cincinnati and the rest of the way by train. He drove the Studebaker from South Bend.

LABOR DEFENSE HITS KIDNAPING OF NEGRO

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—The International Labor Defense today sent a telegram to Governor B. M. Miller, of Alabama, protesting the reported kidnaping of Thomas Jasper, Huntsville (Ala.) negro, who is accused of annoying a white girl.

The telegram, signed by J. Lewis Engdahl, said:

"The International Labor Defense must conclude that the alleged kidnaping of Thomas Jasper at Huntsville, the home of . . . (two white women) who helped frame nine Scottsboro boys, is nothing but a brutal lynching unless Jasper is produced alive. We denounce this new outrage and pledge wide protest against it."

The "Scottsboro boys" referred to are the Alabama negroes who were convicted of rape, eight of whom have been sentenced to death. Another, Roy Wright, 14, is awaiting retrial.

W. W. Gaines Is Victim Of Thieves 6th Time

W. W. Gaines, head of the Atlanta board of education, has been the victim of petty thieves six times within the past two months. The last was Saturday night, when two large ferns were taken from his front porch.

Mr. Gaines stated Sunday that for the most part the thieves have been "flower thieves" and that they have not only raided his home but others in the neighborhood. He lives at 762 Capitol avenue, S. E. Five times the vandals have cut his flowers and raided his flower pots, but a week ago they went just a little further, he states, and, breaking into his garage, attempted to steal his car. A glass was broken in the car but a locked ignition switch foiled the attempted robbery.

INSTALLMENT XXXIV.

Kringelein's embarrassment as he stood in the fitting room of the large tailor's shop was terrible. Three elegant gentlemen were busily occupied with him. Twelve very shabby Kringeleins were reflected in the mirrors set at acute angles to each other. One elegant gentleman brought in coats and suits, one elegant gentleman knelt on the floor and pulled down the bottoms of his trousers, one elegant gentleman merely stood by and surveyed Kringelein with a half-closed professional eye and murmured unintelligible words. On a sofa, beneath pictures of impossibly beautiful film actresses, sat Baron Gaigern, flapping his stitched gloves on the palm of his hand and looking away from Kringelein as though he were ashamed of him.

Pitiful matters came to light, dread secrets of the bookkeeper, Otto Kringelein, of Fredersdorf. His suspenders had been clumsily mended with string. His vest, which had got much too big for him, Anna had taken in by stitching two thick tucks in the lining at the back. He wore his father's shirts, and they were too large for him. The enormous shirt was made of wool, thick and discolored, presenting in front only a small extent of linen front, like a little shop window on the street. There was still one more woollen garment beneath the woollen shirt, a washed-out and much darned undervest. Below that came a dappled catskin, an approved preventive of stomach ache and attacks of ague. The elegant gentlemen did not move a muscle. Kringelein would have found it easier if they had made a joke of it, or given him a word of consolation.

"I have never troubled myself much about being in the fashion. I'm one of the old school," he said, imploring the forgiveness of these icily professional gentlemen. No one made any reply. They stripped him of layer after layer as if they were peeling an onion. It was almost as bad as the operating room. Then the three gentlemen began to clothe him.

Gaigern cheered up and gave advice. "Have that," he said, or "don't have that." Kringelein squinted at the tickets with the prices attached to each article. He thought of nothing but the prices, but he did not venture to ask. Finally, though, he asked, and then he received such an immeasurable shock that he wanted to run from the place. The fitting room became a prison cell with four grim warders and looking-glass walls. And then something happened to him. He fell in love with the silk shirt he was being compelled to put on.

"Ah," said Kringelein, standing with his head on one side and his mouth open, "ah-ah." The tastefully patterned silk of the shirt caressed his skin. The collar fitted, it did not chafe nor scratch, it was neither too tight nor too loose, and a tie fell smoothly and softly over his breast, beneath which his heart beat in secret jubilation. It beat hard and somewhat painfully, but all the same with relief. Now socks and shoes were put before him, most obligingly. After this he was rigged up in a suit which the baron had selected.

They led Kringelein to the mirror and turned him about on his axis like an unresisting wooden doll, and it was just then, at the very moment when Kringelein encountered himself in the glass, that he had the first inkling that he lived. He recognized himself with a strong convulsion as though by a flash of lightning. What occurred at this moment was that a well-dressed and most elegant stranger approached him with an air of embarrassment, a person who at the same time was appallingly familiar to him as the real Kringelein of Fredersdorf, and then the vision passed. A second later the sight was no longer new. The miracle of transformation was past.

Kringelein was now breathing deeply and with effort, for he was being menaced by an attack of acute pain.

"I think it suits me very well," he said like a child to Gaigern.

Kringelein took possession of his well-fitting suit as he dug his hands into its clean new pockets.

His fears were changed abruptly into the joy of buying and possessing, and for the first time he experienced the giddy exhilaration that comes of spending money. He broke down the walls behind which he had lived for a lifetime. He bought and bought. He did not ask the price, but simply bought. He stroked stuffs and silks, felt the brim of hats, sampled waistcoats and belts, matched one color against another, and appreciated their harmonies with the relish of a connoisseur.

Kringelein bought a brown lounge suit of rough English tweed, a pair of dark gray trousers with a fine white stripe to go with an elegant morning coat; he bought a dinner jacket and trousers, which only needed the position of a button or two altered; he bought underclothing, shirts, collars, socks, ties, a coat such as Gaigern wore, a soft and astonishingly light hat, bearing the trade mark in gold of a Florence firm, and finally, carrying in his hands a pair of wash leather gloves just like Gaigern's, he repaired to the pay desk. There things went very smoothly. Kringelein paid a thousand marks down, the rest to follow in three instalments. Outside it was sunny but cold. The air was like iced wine, Kringelein observed in passing. Hitherto he had always crept about. Now he stepped out. He had three steps to go to the gray-blue four-seater, and three times he raised his new-shod feet from the pavement with a vigorous and elastic step.

"Pleased?" asked Gaigern, laughing and with his hand already on the starter. "What does it feel like? More yourself?"

"Splendid. Tip-top. First class," Kringelein replied as he sat down beside him with a nonchalant air. He took off his pince-nez and rubbed his eyes with his finger and thumb. It was a habit of his when fatigued.

It had just occurred to him that he would no longer be there when the first installment was due.

Gaigern's fingers were all impatience. The car shot along past houses, advertisement kiosks, blocks of pedestrians at street crossings.

There were many people in Fredersdorf who had never been in a motor car. Anna, for example, had never been in a motor car. But Kringelein was in one now. His lips were tightly compressed, his elbows and shoulder joints were rigid, and the rush of air made his eyes water. Taking the corners made a severe demand on his nerves, and his heart went up and down beneath his new silk shirt. It was the same fearful joy as when in his childhood the merry-go-round was erected on Michenau Heath and you could have three rides for a penny.

"Where are we going?" he shouted into Gaigern's right ear, for the noise of the engine seemed deafening.

"A little way out, to have lunch, along the Avus," Gaigern answered unconcernedly.

The street raced to meet the car with ever increasing swiftness. Kringelein felt a shock that contracted the skin of his scalp, but it protended nothing. Gaigern had merely stopped at the north gate of the Avus and now he was already off again.

"Now, we can let it rip," he said, and, before Kringelein understood what he meant, he had done so.

At first the wind grew colder and colder, and blow harder and harder, until at last it beat like a fist against his face. The engine sang on a rising note and at the same time something ghastly occurred to Kringlein's legs. They were filled with air. Bubbles rose in his joints as if they would burst. For several seconds, that seemed to last an incredible time, he could not breathe, and moment after moment he thought now I'm dying. This is what it's like then. I am dying.

NEW MACHINES SPEED ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Many times in the past few years the question has been brought up by legislatures as well as individauls as to how much money the state highway department of Georgia could spend economically within a year constructing highways and bridges.

"While we are not attempting to answer this question," says O. B. Duncan, manager of the contractors' equipment department of Yancey Brothers, Inc., "we believe a few facts as to what is going on now will afford an idea of what could be done, as the paving contractors and road builders in Georgia are constructing roads faster and more economically now than they have ever been able to do heretofore.

"The Whitley Construction Company, which is constructing 20-foot concrete roads in the state with brand-new and most modern paving equipment, recently broke all state records as far as we are able to learn, for daily production when they poured 1,879 lineal feet of 20-foot concrete road in one day. Next for high speed production comes Claussen-Lawrence Construction Company, who had a daily production of 1,818 lineal feet of 20-foot road. Many others are getting 1,600 and 1,700 lineal feet per day, and Whitley again broke the record last week by averaging more than 1,600 lineal feet each day, thereby building in one week 1 3-4 miles of concrete road.

"The equipment with which Whitley broke the state record consisted of a one-yard P&H crane equipped with 40-foot boom, and a one-yard Blaw-Knox clamshell bucket, a fleet of one-batch Chevrolet and Ford trucks hauling the batches to a 27-E Rex paver; a Rex triplex road pump furnished the water, and an Ord finishing machine finished the concrete which was placed between Blaw-Knox forms. The subgrade was prepared by Caterpillar tractors, Caterpillar graders and Buffalo-Springfield rollers.

"When we have considered that there are 20 concrete paving outfits owned by Georgia contractors, and at the same time several out-of-the-state contractors occasionally coming in and getting work, this gives us a good conception of how much and how fast roads can be paved with modern equipment and efficient organization which these contractors have.

"In addition to the concrete road construction, there are contractors constructing other type roads and they, too, are making headway to equal that made by the concrete road building contractors. For instance, Campbell Contracting Company, of Columbus, Ga., is constructing in Pulaski, Dodge and Jeff Davis counties a limerock road at the rate of 2,500 to 3,000 feet per day with one outfit."

BOND ADVANCE LED BY GERMAN ISSUES

BY ALEXANDER HENDERSON.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—The most important developments in the bond market last week occurred at the close of the period when a general rise, in which German obligations scored the largest gains, developed.

Previous to this belated movement the general trend had been uncertain. This latter fact is emphasized by the average closing price of 30 representative issues consisting of 10 bonds each of industrial, railroad and public utility bonds which was 94.5, compared with 94.6 seven days earlier. All of the three constituent averages closed higher on Saturday which merely canceled earlier narrow declines.

The news of the plans of the Hoover administration to provide aid for Germany furnished a strong stimulant for the obligations of that country on Saturday. The 5 1-2s of the national government of 1965 were unusually active then and jumped 5 1-4 points in addition to gradual gains earlier in the week. The turnover in other German issues was not so large but strength in them was general. Other foreign issues, particularly those of European borrowers, shared in the upward movement to a lesser extent.

Railroad loans turned firm toward the end of the week, a movement which merely recovered earlier declines in many instances. After the close on Saturday dispatches from Washington reported that the interstate commerce commission had asked for further details from the railroads concerning their application for higher freight rates.

Industrial and public utility loans crept upward but the movement was so gradual as often to escape notice. Loans of the United States government fluctuated back and forth without a definite trend most of the time on moderate activity.

An interesting event occurred on Thursday when bids for $23,000,000 of 3 1-2 per cent serial bonds of New Jersey were opened, and only $3,000,000 of them were sold.

There is no question that the credit of that state has high standing. Bids received for the unsold $20,000,000 of bonds, whose proceeds were to be used for highways, totaled only $14,000,000. Wall Street's interpretation of this result was that the required minimum bid of par for 3 1-2 per cent bonds approximated the retail market too closely to make the issue attractive. A meeting of state officials to arrange for another sale is scheduled for next Tuesday.

Public offerings of bonds last week totaled $79,228,000, compared with $21,910,000 the preceding week and $143,212,500 for the corresponding period a year ago. State and municipal issues totaling $34,633,000 totaled more than those of any other group. The sale of all the New Jersey issues would have increased that total. Public utility offerings amounted to $31,000,000. Fairly large municipal and public utility issues are expected in the near future.

The general advance of Saturday will have to continue for some time, however, before the market is strong enough to permit extensive flotations of issues of secondary standing.

HOT WEATHER BOOSTS MATTRESS RENOVATING

This is the busy season for mattress renovating. Especially is this so when the weather is hot like it has been the past few weeks. The rush of work is due mainly to the fact that a lumpy hard mattress is noticed more in hot weather, and persons do not sleep as soundly as in cold weather, and in looking for the cause, quickly place it where it belongs. Old, worn out ticking, lumpy, hard mattress.

One of the busiest firms at this time is the Superior Mattress Company, of 835 Bankhead avenue. Their fleet of light delivery trucks are hurrying and scurrying around Atlanta and in nearby towns, picking up old mattresses in the morning and returning them renovated the same afternoon.

The firm also renovates old style feather beds, and makes them over into the new-style pillow effect. They begin the process by washing and drying the feather, and then sewing the ticking at short distances, to keep the feathers from shifting from one side of the mattress to the other.

This firm recently added the new inner spring style of renovating old mattresses, which is done by taking the old lumpy cotton, after it is reginned, dust blown out of it, and making it into layers of cotton felt bats, and the light strong wire spring is put in between six layers on each side. The ticking is then sewed on, and a felt inner spring mattress is returned.

The Superior Mattress Company is one of these Atlanta service companies that owe their success chiefly to the fact that they are doing their work so well that some families have given them repeat orders for the past eight or nine years.

The company does a great deal of work for hotels, boarding houses, public institutions and the heads of large families.

The management of this firm has always taken a very active interest in civic and church work. They are displaying unusual interest in the Atlanta centennial world's fair, and the president, M. R. Simon, says that the projecting of a big world's fair will be a powerful stimulus to revive business.

Past Week Sees Developments Which May Turn Trade Trends

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—While general business came more and more under the influence of summer lassitude during the past week, there were a few new developments which may profoundly influence the course of economic recovery.

The international outlook brightened perceptibly toward close of the week, when President Hoover disclosed that he was carrying on nonpartisan conferences with political leaders "particularly directed toward strengthening the situation in Germany."

The German financial crisis, the severity of which may be measured by the reichsbank's loss of nearly $130,000,000 in gold in a single week, had been a disturbing influence throughout the financial centers of the world.

Domestically, the filing of the petition of the railroads for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates was one of the most important financial and business developments of the year. Opinion as to the merits of the case of the carriers naturally varies widely, since a blanket increase in freight rates would affect in one way or another virtually the entire business fabric. Proponents of the project believe that it would be a powerful influence toward checking the decline in commodity prices and improving employment.

Hopeful Signs.

Commodity prices during the past fortnight, as measured by commonly quoted indices, have shown the most hopeful signs of bumping bottom in some three months. Of course, there is no means of determining whether the prospect of a revision of freight rates has had any bearing on the matter.

Fresh hope for improvement in the thoroughly demoralized petroleum industry was generated by the ending of the extremely costly price cutting war on the Pacific coast. Furthermore, it was felt that real progress toward bringing the great East Texas pool under control was being made.

So far as general merchandising is concerned, the improvement in retail trade noted by the mercantile reviews in the previous week, was not well maintained, but inquiry for fall merchandise is developing in a manner distinctly encouraging to the wholesale trade.

Cotton mills have been feeling the influence of summer quiet, but the inquiry for worsted and wool goods for fall has been cheering. Many large mills are well employed, and many fabrics are not available for delivery on new orders until well into August. Shoe manufacturers continue fairly well occupied, and hide prices have strengthened. Also, some manufacturers of hardware and machinery report improvement.

Steel Slackens.

In the heavy industries, steel continues to slacken, as generally forecast. In fact the decline has been somewhat more rapid than more optimistic observers had anticipated, and it is now acknowledged that midsummer shutdowns may bring the industry to such a state of complete quiet as that experienced last December. Plans to improve the price structure, however, have brought announcements of increases in steel sheets for the third quarter, but the new prices remain to be tested.

Automobile manufacturing continues to slacken, and building contracts as reported by F. W. Dodge Corporation for the first half of June show a slump of about 10 per cent from the average for May.

Mining remains severely depressed by low prices. Copper during the week was generally reduced to the basis of 8 cents a pound, domestic, a level at which it is questionable if any of the leading producers can show a profit. Lumber, coal and most others of the heavy lines were quiet. In keeping with the seasonal trend, distinct improvement is not expected until August.

COTTON ADVANCES AT NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, June 21.—(AP)—After ruling only moderately active during the first portion of the week with fluctuating prices, the cotton market became strong and exceedingly brisk with a large increase in trading volume in the last two days of the period. Prices which in early week alternately advanced on trade buying and price fixing, and declined on favorable weather in the belt, turned quite firm later and advanced sharply on shorts covering and good trade buying with a decided shortage of offerings.

Prices which early in the week dropped to levels 7 points under the close of Saturday last, advanced 49 to 50 points or a dollar and a half a bale. Trading was particularly active in the short Saturday session, prices making the highs of the week on that day and closing near the top with net gains for the week of 35 to 40 points.

While some traders attributed the advance to technical conditions and to efforts to increase the premiums on the late months to afford a better carrying charge, the more apparent cause of the advance was the good trade demand coupled with extensive price fixing. Some recovery in the stock market was a contributory cause as was also an impression that the crop is suffering from the extreme hot weather and inadequate moisture.

Advices from Washington detailing President Hoover's efforts to overcome the causes making for business depression helped the market some on Saturday. There was also some evidences of a broader speculative interest in the market.

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Last Year.
July	8.94	8.45	8.91	13.21
Oct.	9.35	8.80	9.32	13.06
Dec.	9.56	9.05	9.54	13.13

Curb Modernizes Means of Giving Price Quotations

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—The New York Curb Exchange has installed in its new building a completely modern central quotation system, in conjunction with which a dial telephone system has been installed through which brokerage offices may obtain bid and asked quotations on stocks.

The new building is scheduled to be formally dedicated about July 15.

The new quotation system which will be placed in operation tomorrow, consists of a special quoting department which is constantly informed of changes in prices by telephone from the floor of the exchange. The system also comprises an especially designed mechanical call distribution arrangement, whereby subscribing brokers may obtain the latest quotations affecting all securities listed on the exchange from their own offices through the dialing of predetermined codes, which established telephone connections with particular quotation operators having access to information directly from the trading floor.

Heretofore, when quotations were requested from outside sources, a messenger had to be sent to the trading post. By the time the information was relayed to the brokerage house, the quotation frequently had changed.

INDIFFERENCE CUTS CURB TRADE VOLUME

BY JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Indifference of professionals and the trading public reduced the volume of curb market trading to nominal proportions last week and gave little significance to the changes in quotations. Until the Saturday rally, the trend was slowly downward in turnovers so small that the inference was that distress liquidation had been virtually completed.

Group movements were inconspicuous, with the notable exception of the oils, which became firm toward the week-end with news of the rise in California prices. Vacuum was erratic, reflecting the opposition which has developed in some quarters to the terms of the Socony merger.

Utilities merely drifted with the quiet speculative tide, losing small fractions during the earlier sessions. Cities Service, whose business is divided between the petroleum and utility fields, was in supply following the published report of May earnings, which showed another decline. The shrinkage was attributed by the company to the unfavorable oil situation.

Newmont Mining was adversely affected by omission of the dividend. General Theaters preferred weakened and Aluminum of America dropped below 100 on Friday, thus losing most of its recent gain. Specialties which showed intermittent strength included Educational Pictures, Philip Morris and Fajardo Sugar. Admission of the new shares of Woolworth Limited gave the market a break in the routine, but the common stock, although active, moved narrowly.

American Silver Friends Picture Great Value of Stabilization

Editor's Note—This is the final story of a series of three on the silver question, written by Alexander R. George, member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press, presenting the many phases and background of the situation.

BY ALEXANDER R. GEORGE.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Virtually every American advocate of silver stabilization emphasizes the benefit to be derived by the United States from the economic rehabilitation of China.

A peaceful, industrious China with stable credits is pictured as a market of tremendous value, a boon not only to the lumber and kerosene exporter, but to the wheat farmer, cotton grower and the factory worker as well. Conversely, a depressed China, its buying capacity crippled is seen as a menace to American economic well-being.

An orient, with its yardstick, silver, at a reasonable exchange value is depicted as the greatest potential customer of a high-geared industrial machine which is alleged to have saturated the American home market.

Businessmen familiar with conditions in China say its great need, along with peace and money, is an adequate internal transportation system.

Some have suggested that the United States, either by itself or with other powers, finance the building of highways in China and oversee the work to insure that funds are expended for the loan and that new revenues are allotted for repayment of the loan.

The senate committee, which investigated the conditions of American commerce with China, concluded that "there must be work provided in China or there will be war. The people through lack of work are compelled to fight in armies in order to get food. Many of them feel they have to loot to live."

Building highways is advocated to give work to multitudes of Chinese, including those now in the armies of the various war lords and others who have no means of livelihood.

This, it is claimed, also would make a market for quantities of road construction machinery and materials. Completion of the highway system would be followed, it is said, by an enormous demand for motor vehicles, accessories and fuel which in turn would make it possible to bring out products of various kinds from the interior of China.

Some exporters have expressed the opinion that a stabilized China would consume the entire wheat surplus of the United States. On the other hand, an impoverished orient, higher priced silver advocates contend, has a marked depressing effect on agriculture in the United States.

Very low wheat in India, they say, means lower wheat in the United States and Argentina. Indian wheat is considered inferior to Canadian or American wheat but it is bought when obtainable at a price sufficiently low enough to offset its relatively poor quality.

Depression in the orient is likewise described as adversely affecting the cotton grower in this country. When India or China cuts down its purchases of the textile industry buys less cotton, the southern farmer buys less silk from Japan. And so the depression spreads in growing circles.

WOMAN IS KILLED BY TRAIN AT MIAMI

MIAMI, Fla., June 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Stella Weatherford, 36, of Miami, was killed late last night when she stumbled and fell in the path of a Seaboard Air Line railroad passenger train.

The train was backing from the downtown passenger station to the yards in Hialeah when the accident occurred.

Mrs. Weatherford is survived by her husband, J. L. Weatherford, and four children.

TARZAN AT THE EARTH'S CORE No. 19

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Ka-goda!" said the creature facing Tarzan. Now in the language of the great apes of Tarzan's own jungle, this word means "Do you surrender?" Tarzan was astounded to hear the same word thus used by these strange creatures of Pellucidar, the inner world. Did his fierce captors and the apes among whom he had been reared to manhood have the same common ancestor and the same language? Then the fellow again demanded: "Ka-goda?" and Tarzan of the Apes replied: "Ka-goda," which also means "I surrender."

And now it was the gorilla-like creature's turn to be surprised. As Tarzan spoke, the brute lowered his cudgel as though astonished to hear the prisoner answer in his own tongue. "Who are you?" he demanded in the language of the great apes. "What are you doing in M'wa-lot's country?" "I am Tarzan—mighty hunter—mighty fighter," replied the ape-man. "I come as a friend. I have no quarrel with your people." With this speech appeared a score more of the shaggy creatures until the surrounding tree limbs sagged beneath their weight.

"How did you learn the language of the Sagoths?" demanded the bull. "We have captured gilaks before, but you are the first one who ever spoke or understood our language." "It is my own people's language," replied Tarzan. "As a little balu, I learned it from Kala and the other apes of the tribe of Kerchak." "We never heard of that tribe," said the bull. "Perhaps he tells not the truth," said another. "Let us kill him. He is only a gilak." "No," said a third, "take him to M'walot. Then the whole tribe may join in the killing."

"That is good," exclaimed another, "take him back to the tribe. Then while we are killing him, we shall dance." The idea seemed to please the others mightily. Three of the Sagoths secured Tarzan's wrists behind his back with a strong buckskin. Having decided upon the Ape-Man's fate, the Sagoths now turned their attention to the saber-tooth, who had returned to the carcass of the thag. He was not feeding but was gazing angrily up into the trees at the Sagoths. Soon began a curious method of warfare between man and beast.

Atlanta Children Score Big Hit In Third Annual Kiddie Revue

If Fanchon and Marco, Keith's or any of the rest of them are looking for talent for the future they can settle back in ease right here in Atlanta, for the third annual Kiddie Revue at the Fox this week, reveals untold honest to goodness talent among the local children.

Adjectives are futile in describing the show put on by these youngsters, ranging in age from four to 16. It is one of the greatest exhibitions of dancing and color that has ever been staged in Atlanta. Not only can those children dance, sing, and play instruments, but they have stage poise that is to be found only in old troupers.

The lavish revue, costumes, stage settings and all, reflect more than just favorably on the talent, patience, and imagination of Senia Solomonoff, who conceived and staged the presentation. His must have been a colossal task, and how well he has succeeded may be seen only by viewing the production. It's an epic of what children can do. Mr. Solomonoff was assisted in the work by Jack Rand, local dance instructor, and he is due much credit for the grace and charm of the dances.

The revue, it is to be remembered, is being staged by the children, their director, and the Fox theater, absolutely gratis. It is given under the auspices of the Atlanta Masonic Club for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, and charming members of the Pi Pi sorority may be found in front of the theater to take voluntary contributions.

So much for the revue as a whole.

There are individual acts that are worthy of more than just a passing glance at the program. Billie Clower and Harriet Reed, do a duet dance with their ankles chained to each other that Saturday night simply "brought down the house," in show parlance. They followed this with a clever number later entitled "Show-Boy—Show-Girl," that was equally well received.

Marion Reinhardt in a song and dance number showed a perfect sense of rhythm as well as a good stage personality in putting over a song. Bowen David Jr. playing a violin solo, has talent and his execution of difficult double string harmony would do credit to a much older and experienced musician. Henry L. Jones Jr., singing "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" as an inmate of the Scottish Rite hospital, will bring a lump in many a throat as he stands there supporting himself on crutches through his number.

Possibly the most intricate and difficult individual dance number is offered by Woodrow Mosher, who does a tap dance on his toes while skipping rope. He comes upon the stage, attired in the conventional trunks of a pugilist and as the first part of his routine taps out the sound of an imaginary punching bag. Then he discards his gloves and swings into his rope dance. It is different and it "takes." The ensemble work is all excellent and never sinks to the mediocre; in the Wedlock Symphony the costuming and stage effects are what may be styled as "different." In this Young Mosher again shines in a Russian dance and co-stars with Mary Ann Linane in an adagio dance.

The Fox in presenting a three-for-one program—picture, vaudeville and revue—should be the attraction that will draw all theater-goers this week. The feature picture, "Five and Ten," starring Marion Davies, is a much overdrawn version of society turning a pert nose ceilingward upon a millionaire's daughter. Maybe this is done in actual life, and again maybe it isn't—but money usually causes most folks to kow tow a-plenty. Marion Davies is not so convincing as the heart-suffering heroine, and Leslie Howard (despite a slight lisp) almost steals the picture, as does Kent Douglas who dies to reunite the shattered family circle. The lines are good.

Fanchon and Marco's "Vaudeville Echoes" idea can not be praised too much. The entire bill is extraordinary. The Kanazawa Japs do a tumbling act that is decidedly novel and clever while a family of three sons, a daughter and their mother, known as the "Four O'Connors" (why just four we don't know), offer a sensational bit of dancing that is decidedly pleasing, especially when done by the youngest member of the family, who does not seem to be more than five years old at the most.

CHANGES MADE IN FOX SCHEDULE

Due to the magnitude of the Fox theater program, Manager Carter Barron announces that the time for performances this week will vary from the usual schedule.

The doors will open at 12 o'clock each day, and the feature picture, "Five and Ten," will start at 12:30, 3:35, 6:40 and 9:50 o'clock. The Kiddie Revue will go on at 2:40, 5:50 and 9:10 o'clock.

In addition to the revue, the Fox will present its usual Fanchon and Marco stage show.

Purse Is Snatched.

Mrs. Rose Goldman, 590 Crew street, reported to police that a negro snatched her purse, containing $47, about 10:30 o'clock Sunday night while she was walking on Capitol avenue, near Richardson street, and escaped.

B. Y. P. U. CONVENTION OPENS IN GAINESVILLE

GAINESVILLE, Ga., June 21.—With approximately 250 young people already registered, representing every part of the state, and others arriving early this week, the Georgia Baptist Young People's Union will open its third annual convention and encampment work Monday on the Riverside Military Academy campus here.

Class work, in 16 divisions, will begin Monday morning, and an extensive recreational program will be launched in the afternoon under the direction of Sibley Burnett, of Louisville, Ky. Class and recreational work will continue daily throughout the week.

Dr. Kyle M. Yates, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, will deliver the principal address at a special session to be held Monday night, and Dr. Louie D. Newton, of Atlanta, will deliver the consecration address Friday night. Special music will be rendered during the week's sessions by Misses Pauline Barton and Elizabeth Jackson, both of Atlanta.

Dr. Harry Clark, superintendent of the Knoxville (Tenn.) public schools, spoke during Sunday school today and again tonight. James W. Merritt, of Atlanta and Gainesville, executive secretary of the Georgia Baptist convention, was the principal speaker at the morning service, and E. E. Lee, of Dallas, southwide B. Y. P. U. field secretary and Miss Winnie Rickett, of Raleigh, N. C., state worker, spoke at a special service held in the afternoon. The night service was followed by a camp fire meeting conducted by Miss Ethyl M. McConnell, of Nashville, Tenn., southwide student worker of the Baptist Sunday school board.

PAUL LUKAS STARS IN GEORGIA FILM

A course in big city police tactics, delineating the progress of the vice squad from the scourge of petting parties to an efficient raiding organization through the assistance of a high-powered stool pigeon, is offered in this week's feature film at Keith's Georgia, a Paramount production, "The Vice Squad."

The story centers around the stool pigeon, portrayed by Paul Lukas, whose career as a rising attache of a foreign embassy was shattered in order to hide the crime of the wife of his superior. Lukas is bullied into becoming a vice squad stool pigeon because of his easy entree to women. He is saved from suicide, attempting to escape his degrading function, by the girl for whom he later sacrifices his regained social station to save from a vice squad "framing."

Other episodes of equal dramatic quality develop the plot of this film which belongs to that group of screen successes based upon the behind-curtain scenes of city political and underworld life that has been the fertile source of front-page stories for the past decade. It is a picture that holds your interest with excitement and sympathetic predicaments. Lukas is assisted by Kay Francis and Judith Wood in stellar roles.

The vaudeville bill for the week shares equally with the feature picture in providing amusement. Joe Browning, comic man and headliner, is pushed for audience popularity by the elaborate Gallo & Tisen music, song and dance turn. Browning's warmly applauded performance is a recitation take-off on the "reformer." The most colorful number of the bill is provided by Tisen's gypsy ensemble and Gallo's dancing.

A Millard & Marland skit, "Give Me My Quarter," and Kikutas' oriental wonder workers keep pace with the general excellency of the bill and add novelty and variety.

Cross Sections of Life In Gate City of South

Burglars entered the Crews & Setzer drugstore at 1199 Lucile avenue early Sunday morning, according to police reports, and made away with approximately $200 worth of cigars and cigarets. Access to the store was gained by forcing a lock upon a side door.

"The President's Special," named in honor of Willis A. Sutton, president of the National Education Association, will leave the Terminal station Tuesday night for Los Angeles for a convention of the N. E. A. There will be approximately 125 educators from all parts of Georgia aboard the special train.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the executive committee of the democratic national committee, will speak at a dinner to be given at the Ansley hotel at 6:30 o'clock Friday night in honor of Richard B. Russell Jr., who will be inaugurated governor of Georgia Saturday.

An increase of $134,000 in the value of the Georgia Power and Light Company of Valdosta over the valuation returned last year for the purposes of taxation was made public Saturday by Comptroller-General William B. Harrison. The amount fixed this year by arbitration is $1,618,994.

Etchings of Howard Brown, artist, formerly of Atlanta, are shown among the exhibits at the High Museum of Art, of water colors, prints and etchings of well-known middle west artists.

Fulton county appropriation of $40,000 will be the chief matter of business to be taken up by the Grady hospital board at its meeting at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. It is expected that formal ratification will be voted. The appropriation represents an increase of $30,000 in county funds over the appropriations of former years.

Classified Postoffice Station F, located at 1054 North Highland avenue, N. E., will be opened Thursday. The new station will offer all facilities held out by the main station except postal savings, and carriers in that district will use it as a base.

Trial of Charles L. Chosewood, one of the few remaining from the municipal graft investigation, will be heard Tuesday before Judge Virlyn B. Moore, following his recent reindictment on a ten-count bill, charging simple larceny and being interested in a city contract.

Friends of Henry H. Cabaniss, who celebrated his eighty-third birthday Sunday, gathered to congratulate him on his long and active newspaper life. He entered journalism the year after the War Between the States, and has since served on many of the leading newspapers of the south.

Wesleyan Conservatory, Macon, will hold its second free scholarship contest during July and two winners will be awarded scholarships.

Officers and directors of the Atlanta City Employee's Association will be elected at a meeting of that organization to be held at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at city hall. The group will discuss amendments to the by-laws seeking to increase the number of delegates representing the public schools from one to three, permitting the superintendent of schools and two officers of the Atlanta Teachers' Association to serve.

Moonlight recital, all-Chopin, will be presented by Hugh Hodgson, noted pianist, in the garden of Mrs. Arthur Tufts at 1255 Clifton road, N. E., at 8:30 o'clock, Friday night. The Druid Hills Garden Club, of which Mrs. Charles LeRoux is president, is sponsor of the program.

A bill prohibiting sale of fresh water fish at certain seasons, the possession of fish during closed seasons and the use of a seine and other trapping devices will be offered in the coming sessions of the general assembly by Peter S. Twitty, Georgia game and fish commissioner.

Secretaries' Club of Atlanta, will meet at 7 o'clock tonight at Lakewood park. The club is composed of secretaries in various civic and business organizations here.

Mrs. D. B. Blalock, 1050 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. W., who has been seriously ill at the Crawford D. Long Memorial hospital, was reported as somewhat improved Sunday night.

Dr. Robert Latta has been appointed to arrange a program and preside at the Speech Arts Club at their meeting at 402 Wesley Memorial church Tuesday night. The public is invited.

Laymen's Union of the Gordon Street Baptist church will hold its monthly banquet at 7 o'clock tonight in the dining hall of the church. G. Everett Millican will be the principal speaker. The following will be nominated for offices: L. L. Edmondson, president; Evans Thompson, vice president; W. L. Long, secretary; W. A. Boyd, assistant secretary; D. E. Caldwell, treasurer.

George W. Andrews, state secretary of the Georgia Baptist Sunday School convention, will deliver the principal address at the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' conference this morning at the First Baptist church at 10 o'clock, according to announcement by Dr. Louie D. Newton, chairman of the program committee. Rev. L. B. Crantford will conduct the devotion.

MOTHERSILL'S SEASICK REMEDY
STOPS ALL TRAVEL SICKNESS

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our darling little daughter, Sarah Ann Evans, who departed this life one year ago today, June 22, 1930.
God knows how much we miss her,
Never shall her memory fade;
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where she is laid.
MR. AND MRS. F. S. EVANS.

"If I Can Save the Money May I Buy That New Hat?"
—ASKED MRS. JONES
"Sure, go ahead," agreed Mr. Jones over his toast and eggs. "How are you going to save it?"
"I'll rent our coal bin to the Campbell Coal Company for the summer."
"Are you crazy? What can they do with it?"
"Why, they'll store our next winter's supply of coal in it—and the June prices are so far below usual winter prices that we'll save real money."
"Call them up today," said Mr. Jones. "Our bin holds ten tons."
